Three Gilt Balls for F. R.
Yes, Maine Went Republican.
King Alfonso Talks.
The Electron Is Real.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

BANKS in New York raised interest rate to 7 per cent for "legitimate business," nothing to do with Stock Exchange speculation. And they say they would have to charge more than 7 per cent if there were too many demands for time money.

That's how the New York Times described the situation.

AND this is what the law of New York state says, Section 370:

"The legal rate of interest shall not be more than $6 on $100 for one year."

Every bank charging more than 6 per cent interest is violating the law, and knows it. In the case of private individuals, any bank charging more than 6 per cent would be unable to recover in court.

HOWEVER, bootleggers defy the law, respectable business men despise the Constitution. There is apparently no good reason why eminent bankers should not turn to usury for a little extra profit, and do their share to breed contempt for law.

Borrowers should send three large gilt balls to be hung up above the Federal Reserve Bank entrance, and similar ornaments to some of the big banks.

MAINE went Republican by the biggest vote in history. Nevertheless, Wall Street was betting 2½ to 1 on Hoover yesterday. A little while ago the same street was betting 3½ to 1 on Hoover. Maine is naturally Republican and has been dry a long time —barring hard cider, etc.

The wise Republican will not attach too much importance to Maine results.

THE King of Spain has talked for moving pictures, his voice recorded by the Fox movietone.

Millions will be interested in a real King who casually says: "I am very glad to say Christopher Columbus was aided in coming to this country by my ancestors."

He is a practical King, this Alfonso, with his mind on his subjects' welfare. He urges American tourists to come to Spain, telling them they will find good roads, and "You may drive as fast as you like. I, myself, have driven too fast for 24 years."

MOST important is the fact that talking pictures will enable everybody to see, study and know the most important people on earth.

That really is progress.

THE electron, mysterious, theoretical, "smallest division of matter," is no imaginary "dot" in space. It possesses definite size, revolving inside the atom, as our earth revolves within the solar system.

We go around our sun once in 365 days. The electron goes around ITS sun, the nucleus at the center of the atom, billions of times every second.

You cannot imagine that, or believe it, and you need not, but science proves it to be a fact.

RECENT important discoveries are due to an Englishman. Prof. Thomson, and an American, Dr. Davisson, of Columbia University, and the big telephone company laboratories.

The electron may not interest moderns, but it interests science and will interest future ages more than this presidential election will—a good deal more.

YOU may not like modern crime, or the sawed-off shotgun brigade. But it is romantic in its way with its loyalties.

Enemies of Capone, known to his friends as "Scarface," killed Tony Lombardo, so the police say.

And many gentlemen await an opportunity to kill "Scarface."

Nevertheless, Capone "paid his respects" to Lombardo in his coffin and sent a large heart of red immortelles to the funeral.

Accompanying Capone, as he visited the corpse of his friend, were half a dozen men, each with his right hand in his coat pocket and, as everybody knew, a gun in the right hand. That takes you back to ancient Rome, when patricians went out similarly protected.

WILLIAM J. BOWEN, president of the Bricklayers' International Union of America, denounces Communism, announcing that his union has in bank $3,865,000 and has paid $10,500,000 in benefits in the last 10 years.

Organized capital, intelligently managed, could have in organized labor a protecting force as efficient as Japan's Samurai were to the "higher ups" that they protected.

And organized capital is beginning to realize that. What difference does it make how much you pay your workers or how few hours they work, if the public pays the bill with a profit left over?

Don't Let Slaying Stop Church, Girl Testifies Tyrrell Admonished Her

DOROTHY CLEGG

"Don't let this disturb you. Go ahead with your church services," Fayette J. Tyrrell admonished startled Munhall First Christian Church members standing around Miss Dorothy Clegg, 19, 115 Virginia avenue, Munhall, last May 13 as he put a smoking revolver into his pocket and left the church through the aisle in which she was standing, Miss Clegg testified today in the court where Tyrrell is on trial for the murder of Philip Clark.

THREATS OF CLARK TOLD BY WIDOW

BULLETIN.

John G. Smith, West Homestead, who described himself as a "particular friend of Phil Clark," bolstered the defense claim of self-defense during Fayette J. Tyrrell's trial for Clark's murder at the afternoon session.

"We were coming home from church one Sunday," he said. "Clark told me:

"'I'm going to kill that . . . and I'll do it in church if I can't do it anywhere else.'

"Another time," Smith continued, "we had just left the church. Clark had been talking to Tyrrell. He told me:

"'My intention was to kill him there, but the preacher interfered.'

"On still a third occasion, Smith testified, we were talking about the divorce. Clark told me:

"That . . . will never bring up that divorce case because he'll be roasting in hell."

A murdered man's widow took the stand as the chief witness in behalf of his slayer in Criminal Court today.

Mrs. Hazel Clark, whose husband, Philip, was shot to death in First Christian Church, Munhall, last May 13, told a jury that her husband, a week before the murder, stopped her on the street to say that the "Ku Klux Klan is behind me. Tyrrell will not long be superintendent of the Sunday school. He will not try your divorce case."

Composed, at times smiling down to the wife of the accused man, beside whom she sat during the first two days of the trial, Mrs. Clark related details of domestic incompatibility which culminated in the murder of her husband by the attorney who sought a divorce for her.

PROMISES BROKEN

"He promised me many times," she said in reciting details of Clark's alleged cruelty, "to do

Pastor at Murder Trial Lets Slip Some News

REV. J. D. WATERS

THE REV. J. D. WATERS, pastor, First Christian Church, Munhall, who fled the church in fear of his life as F. J. Tyrrell shot and killed Phinp Clark during services last May 13, has an eye for publicity.

Seated in the murder trial courtroom yesterday, Rev. Waters, who had just left the witness stand, wrote a note which he handed to reporters at the press table.

"Please put in your stories," he wrote, "that there'll be a grand home-coming service at First Church next Sunday, September 14. The state secretary will conduct the service."

Tyrrell may be free, or maybe not, by Sunday.

HOOVER'S LEAD 2 TO 1 IN DAY'S PENNA. VOTE

The cause of Gov. Alfred E. Smith suffers its worst day by the latest returns in the straw vote poll of Pennsylvania conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Herbert Hoover achieved a lead in the day's balloting closely approaching a 2-to-1 vote in his favor and his majority over the Democratic candidate in the state totals to date stands at 2,639. A total of 21,839 votes have been recorded.

How states are voting—Page 1, Second Section

Support of Hoover in the interior counties, strongly rural, was overwhelming. Returns from electors in 20 such counties resulted thus: Hoover 499; Smith 234.

The Republican standard-bearer is a stauch favorite in the ballots received from Philadelphia, with 368 to 206 for Smith. The women voters of the first city continued to support Hoover strongly, contributing 175 to his total. Smith ran slightly behind Hoover in suburban areas.

The totals to date in the Pennsylvania canvass, part of the poll of the United States by the Hearst papers, stands as follows: Hoover, 12,239, 8,101 men and 4,138 women; Smith 9,600, 6,348 men and 3,252 women.

This vote in 1924 was divided as follows: Coolidge, 15,367, 10,051 men and 5,316 women; Davis, 1,703, 1,285 men and 418 women; LaFollette,1,624.

Minister Divorces Eloper

His wife drove away in an auto with John Gibbons, a church deacon, on May 20, 1924, the Rev. Thomas H. Hughes, former pastor of the Duquesne Christian Church, testified in his divorce suit against Hazel E. Hughes.

His recital of the auto trip of Mrs. Hughes and Deacon Gibbons won Hughes a divorce, Judge George V. Moore today signing the decree.

What happened after the couple left the Mifflin township home of the Rev. Hughes was not revealed. The minister testified that he had heard Mrs. Hughes had obtained a divorce decree in Reno, and again, he had heard that the decree was granted in Utah. He doesn't know positively, he said.

Married in 1909 in Turtle Creek, the Hughes had one child. Gibbons has a wife and three children.

SPEED PLANES HOP FROM N.Y.

BULLETIN.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A telephone message received here early this afternoon from Clifford McMillan, of Syracuse, first to take off in the transcontinental air race, said that McMillan had been forced down on a mountain eight miles west of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The flier reported that his plane had not been damaged, but he requested that a ship with spare parts be sent to him at once.

International News Service.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The non-stop race of the trans-continental air derby started at 11:35 o'clock this morning when Clifford McMillan, of Syracuse, N. Y., took off for Mines Field, Los Angeles, Cal., in a Stinson Detroiter monoplane, with C. A. Herrick as a passenger.

A large crowd saw McMillan zoom into the air and head in a southwesterly direction—a larger crowd than witnessed any of the three trans-continental races which preceded the non-stop flight.

SMOOTH TAKE-OFF

McMillan's plane made a smooth takeoff, starting from the east end of the runway and dipping slightly shortly after the wheels left the ground on the west end. The plane disappeared to the southwestward in a slight ground haze which restricted ground visibility to about two miles.

Shortly after McMillan's take-off, Oliver Le Boutellier taxied the Bellanca monoplane, "North Star," into position at the head of the runway.

Mrs. James A. Stillman, the well-known society woman, is owner of this plane. She posed for photographs beside the plane but said she would not accompany Le Boutellier, whose co-pilot is George King.

McMillan's Stinson plane, bearing race No. 25, has a Wright whirlwind motor and carried 450 gallons of gasoline.

SOLO FLIERS OFF 2ND

The second starter was M. B. Mamer, who took off alone for the long flight in a Buhl special air sedan powered by a Wright whirlwind motor. He left the ground at 1:15 p. m., Mamer was to have been accompained by C. A. Paulson, of Spokane, but after a false start Paulsen had to be left behind to lighten the ship.

Father Devlin Dies

The Rev. Thomas Devlin, 75, one of the most prominent members of the Catholic clergy in this district and pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church, North Side, for the last six years, died this morning at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Father Devlin, a native of Pittsburgh, was born October 18, 1853, on the corner of Penn avenue and Forty-fifth street, the son of James S. and Johanna Walsh Devlin. He attended St. Paul's Cathedral School and St. Francis College, Loretto, Pa. He completed his ecclesiastical studies at St. Michael's Seminary, Glenwood, being ordained a priest September 23, 1878.

When a young priest he ministered to those who were shot while on the hillside above the Twenty-eighth street roundhouse in the Pennsylvania Railroad riots in July, 1877. In the early part of the same year he brought spiritual consolation to the victims of the smallpox epidemic in the Municipal Hospital.

His first assignment was assistant to the Rev. James Treacy of St. Brigid's Church. His first charge was when he was appointed pastor of St. Rose's Church, Cannelton, Beaver county. On March 3, 1881, he was appointed pastor of St. Mary's of the Mount Church, Mt. Washington, but remained there only two years when he was given charge of Holy Cross Church, South Side. He built the present Holy Cross Church and parochial school and established the Holy Name Society in the parish, the first branch of the society in the Pittsburgh diocese.

In 1889 Father Devlin helped materially to establish South Side Hospital. He built Holy Angels' Church, Hays, and in 1904 was a co-founder of St. Joseph's Hospital. In the same year he was appointed superintendent of Pittsburgh diocesan parochial schools.

He supervised the first Diocesan Teachers' Institute in July, 1906, and in October, 1907, was secretary of the National Eucharistic Congress, the fourth in the United States, and the first in Pittsburgh.

Father Devlin received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Emmitsburg, Md., in 1908. He organized the Catholic Charities of the diocese of Pittsburgh. During the years of the World War he was active in war relief movements. Appointed permanent pastor of St. Peter's church, North Side, in January 1923, where he celebrated in September 1926 the golden anniversary of his entry to the priesthood.

He leaves two brothers, James A., superintendent of Calvary and St. Mary's cemeteries, and Frank X. Devlin, of Chicago; four sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Coyle, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Mary Louckley, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. John Riley, of Toledo, O., and Mrs. Emma Matthews, of Buffalo, N. Y., and several nieces and nephews.

DAPPER KILLING FIGURES IN RUM RING PROBE

The slaying of Dr. Harry R. Dapper, Carrick physician, on a "mercy errand" three weeks ago, will have an echo in the Federal booze-graft probe now on before the United States grand jury.

A subpena was issued this afternoon for Henry A. Dapper, father of the slain physician, and it was revealed that four banks previously had been subpenaed to produce bank records of either the father or the dead physician.

The calling of the elder Dapper and the bank records, was due to the prevalence of rumors that the death of the younger Dapper might have been prompted by bootlegger or dope activities.

BANK BOOKS SCANNED

Officials of some of the banks, it was reported, already have testified relative to financial transactions of the father or his son.

Among the banks subpenaed are the Fourteenth Street Bank to produce deposit slips and other bank papers concerning the account of Henry A. Dapper; the Carrick Bank on transactions involving both Henry A. Dapper and Dr. Harry Dapper; the Provident Trust Company, for the record of Henry A. Dapper and the Brentwood State Bank for record of Dr. Harry Dapper. Bank subpenas were served last Saturday.

United States Attorney John D. Meyer lost his first skirmish to commit to jail Mrs. Rose S. Levine, 717 Hastings street, who yesterday refused to testify before the federal grand jury.

His petition, citing Mrs. Levine for contempt of court, in which he asked commitment to jail of the woman, was denied by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker because it did not contain a list of questions asked the woman in the grand jury room. The court also ruled that Mrs. Levine need not answer questions concerning the activities of her husband. A new petition will be filed.

Von Elm Beaten By 3-2

He was beaten by Arthur W. (Ducky) Yates, of Rochester, N. Y., by a margin of 3 and 2 in the first 18-hole match of the day and summarily eliminated.

PITTSBURGH ONLY CITY WITH 25-CENT BUS FARE

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

Pittsburgh is the only large city in the United States which allows a transportation company to charge a 25-cent bus fare. In New York, in Chicago, in Detroit a bus ride costs only 10 cents.

Bus fares bring up no question of financially weak lines as do traction fares. In each of the cities mentioned the bus lines are carrying passengers at a profit for 10 cents.

They have extended their lines and have achieved efficiency undreamed of in this city.

John Hertz, father of the modern taxicab business, and J. A. Ritchie have given New York, Chicago and St. Louis some of the most efficient motor bus services in existence. They never charged more than 10 cents.

On many routes this fare includes transfers. They are reputed to have made fortunes for themselves and their associates.

But Pittsburgh is content to pay 150 per cent more than other cities for service which reaches only a few sections and which is not as frequent as in other cities. It is willing to pay two-and-a-half times more for a bus ride than the price that has made other bus operators wealthy.

"LUMBERJACK"—M'GOVERN; "YAP"—BABCOCK

Hurling bitter invective at each other, County Commissioners E. V. Babcock and Charles C. McGovern, at the close of a commissioners' meeting yesterday, engaged in the hottest verbal clash in the history of the present board.

So heated did the tirade become, that for a time it was feared that the commissioners would engage in physical combat. It was apparently only through the coolness of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong that a fist fight was averted.

APPOINTMENT STARTS ROW

The trouble started when Commissioner McGovern questioned the right of Armstrong to appoint Attorney A. C. Leslie, son of Max G. Leslie, an assistant county solicitor, without calling a board meeting. Attorney Leslie was appointed last week to succeed Attorney W. C. Jacob, who died. At the same time Commissioner Armstrong appointed Attorney Joseph I. Winslow, solicitor for the Tax Board.

"What right had you to make such appointments individually?" asked McGovern. "You sent a former commissioner to his grave before his time by the autocratic actions of a former board of commissioners, but I am here to tell you that you are not going to bury me."

Turning to Armstrong, McGovern started to excoriate him. When McGovern made some reference to Commissioner Armstrong "boasting that he carried a glasshouse card," Commissioner Babcock jumped to his feet.

"I object to such remarks and slander," Babcock shouted as he faced his colleague.

"You shut up and sit down, you big lumberjack," McGovern bellowed.

"I wil not shut up, neither will I sit down, you big mouth yap," shot back Babcock.

ARMSTRONG INTERVENES

By this time Commissioner Armstrong had begun to play a tattoo on the desk with a paper file. He pleaded for order.

McGovern and Babcock moved toward each other, but Armstrong stood between them and held them off.

"You are only a detective. You had better shoot another man while down," Babcock shouted as Armstrong adjourned the meeting.

McGovern continued his tirade as Babcock and Armstrong started to leave the room.

"Where is that big stiff?" asked McGovern when he discovered Commissioner Babcock had departed. "I'll tell him something."

The conference room was filled with county employes, who had rushed in when they heard the noise.

THREAT TO TYRRELL BARED

better. But he always broke his promises."

Mrs. Clark did not bear any outward signs of mourning as she took the stand. She was dressed in a blue georgette dress with a red belt, low-cut black shoes and black silk house. She wore a light necklace.

"The Sunday before the—tragedy—I met my husband while I was returning from church," she said. "He stopped me and said very harsh things about both Mr. Tyrrell and me."

It was then that Clark made the threat about the Ku Klux Klan, she testified.

Assistant District Attorney Haggerty jumped to his feet when Mrs. Clark mentioned the Ku Klux Klan and objected to the admission of that part of her testimony.

Attorney Coleman, for the defense contended that it was essential to his client's plea of self defense. Judge Stotz ruled that it should be stricken from the record.

The widow was the first witness called by the defense. She substantiated the theory advanced in the opening talk to the jury in which Attorney Thomas Hoffman, assisting W. H. Coleman in the defense, declared that Tyrrell killed Clark because he was in "grave fear of his own life."

RECITES TYRRELL'S FEARS

A dramatic tale of how a calm, stolid man—goaded too long by fear—slew an enemy to preserve himself was unfolded to a jury today as counsel for Attorney Fayette J. Tyrrell began to answer the state's demand for their client's life.

Attorney Thomas Hoffman told it in chatty, restrained fashioned, and promised proof. There would be evidence, he said, to show Tyrrell had been justified in ending the life of Philip Clark and interrupting services of the First Christian Church, Munhall, last May 13. On that basis, he asked freedom for his client.

Clark, said Hoffman, had carried on "a campaign of terror" against Tyrrell for almost two years. He traced its origin to domestic unhappiness of Clark and his wife, Hazel.

RE-UNITED CLARKS

The jurors were told how Mrs. Clark worked before—and after—her marriage; how twice she left her husband; and how both times her friend, Tyrrell, had helped to reconcile the couple.

The third break came, and neither Tyrrell, nor the Rev. J. Daniel Waters, who had taken a hand in the Clarks' affairs before could patch it up. Tyrrell had promised Mrs. Clark that he would file a divorce libel for her as a last resort. He did so.

"Then," said Hoffman "The reign of terror began."

There followed a picture of a Tyrrell gradually breaking under the strain, as fright piled upon fright. A Tyrrell keeping to the shadows when night found him abroad, fleeing from his office at threat of Clark's approach, doing business in the shadow of terror, attributing every injury done him to his enemy—Clark.

FEARED CLARK GUN

Finally, a Tyrrell, armed and desperate, was portrayed arranging the hymns for Mothers' Day in the little Munhall church. And then—it was the best card Hoffman had—Tyrrell walked from the church study, whence the pastor, sensing trouble, had fled, and met Clark in an aisle.

"Clark," said Hoffman, "had a gun. Or perhaps he hadn't I don't know. But there was something in his hand that looked like a nickel-plated revolver. He waved it as Tyrrell came down the aisle and shouted, 'F. J. Tyrrell,' and pointed with that bright object. It may have been a pair of glasses. There is a big window in that end of the church, and the sun might have so glinted from a pair of glasses as to make them look like a gun.

"SELF PRESERVATION"

"Anyway," Tyrrell cried, "Don't come any farther," as Clark started forward. Then Tyrrell fired.

"But he was unaccountable for his action. The instinct of self-preservation was driving him. That instinct told him 'Destroy thy enemy.' So, we ask you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, to set Mr. Tyrrell free."

The defense opened this morning, after the commonwealth had rested at 11:15 o'clock. The first defense witnesses were called after the noon adjournment. There will be many more than appeared for the commonwealth in direct argument, defense counsel indicated.

PLAN STRONG REBUTTAL

The commonwealth, it is believed, will introduce many witnesses in rebuttal to the defense claims of self-defense, after Tyrrell's attorneys rest. In the direct presentation, Assistant District Attorney Haggerty sought only to establish the fact of the murder and that it was "a willful, premeditated killing, without justification or excuse."

Last witnesses were Elmira Smith, 14, and Mildred Smith, 16, pupils in the Sunday school and witnesses of the murder. Previous to them, Dorothy Crawford, 13, another member of the Sunday school, described Tyrrell's actions after firing three shots into Clark as they met in the church aisle. The dead man's father, Robert A. Clark, Sr., took the stand and described the heart-anguish of his son at their last meeting on the day preceding the murder.

A monotonously weary courtroom awoke with a start when Miss Dorothy Clegg, 19, of 115 Virginia avenue, Munhall, came toward the witness chair.

"GO ON WITH SERVICE"

"I was standing at the head of the aisle in the rear of the church when the shooting occurred," she testified.

"Mr. Tyrrell placed the revolver in his pocket and started toward the door. Then he walked back to the window in the rear of the church and picked up his hat. He turned around as he started out.

"'Don't let this disturb you. Go ahead and have your church services,' he said as he walked out."

Judge Robert A. Stotz, presiding, notified attorneys that night sessions will be held tonight and Thursday and possible later in the week if the case is not finished.

Revolt in Spain at Crisis

HENDAYE, France, Sept. 12.—The revolutionary movement attempting to overthrow the Spanish government of Dictator Primo de Rivera continued throughout last night and a crisis was expected within the next 24 hours.

Although thousands of persons were jailed since the revolt plot was discovered at Saragosa, the government had not succeeded in quelling the uprising.

It is expected, however, that the revolutionary forces will either meet defeat or victory by tomorrow.

Rigid censorship has been imposed on all news coming from Spain concerning the revolt movement and the only news available is trickling through frontier towns.

CURCIO

Thomas Curcio, 42, prominent Italian, was found shot to death in his farmhouse doorway, near Magee School, on the fringe of fashionable Sewickley Heights township.

FARMHOUSE

Here Curcio and Nick Bartolotto, his hired man, were both found dead, the former evidently slain yesterday morning and the latter Sunday night. Bartolotto's bound body, struck by three bullets, was found in the cellar of this little farmhouse. Friends seeking Curcio after his absence made the discovery.

COWS BREAK

Horses, cows and sheep, together with 250 or more chickens, were unattended since early Sunday. Cows broke out in search o. fodder. Members of Curcio's family are caring for the stock.

ON CASE

Today county detectives are faced with another murder mystery almost as baffling as the Dapper case. The slayer or slayers fled in Curcio's automobile, of which no trace has been found. Detectives on the case are W. O. Alexander, Michael Ford and John Geisler.

SON

Hansel Curcio, 19, son of the slain man, visited the farm to look after neglected crops and stock. An unusually heavy crop of grapes is ready for picking and he started in immediately to put the farm ship-shape.

MAFIA VICTIM AWARE "HE WAS "MARKED"

The double Mafia killing yesterday on the fringe of fashionable Sewickley Heights appears almost as baffling as the Dapper case, despite the fact that county detectives anticipated the murder, it was revealed today.

Thomas Curcio, 42, wealthy Italian leader, one of the victims, feared for his life and was constantly on guard, County Detective Philip Goldberg declared, but even though he was marked for death he steadfastly refused to reveal the identity of his enemies. Nick Bartolotto, 67, the other victim, was slain because he happened to "be in the way"—he had to be removed so the killers would be unhampered in "getting" Curcio, county detectives declare.

The slayers apparently planned the double murder deliberately. They timed their work and picked the place for the killing with every consideration for their leisurely escape in the victim's automobile.

Several attempts had been made on Curcio's life in the past few years and it was almost common knowledge around Sewickley that the wealthy Italian some day would "go for a ride." Recently, Curcio was arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. He was fined $30 and costs, and went out and bought another revolver, detectives say.

County Detective Goldberg knew this, but he was powerless to prevent Curcio's murder. Several times he talked with Curcio and begged him to tell him who it was that wanted to kill him. Goldberg tried to get the Italian to make a statement which the detective promised to file away until after Curcio's death, but the Italian wouldn't "talk."

"I feel too bad," his brother said. "They get my brother, but he was good man—never do anything to anybody!"

Questioned as to who was meant by "they," he only shook his head and replied simply, "I dunno—somebody maybe!"

"Was it the Blackhand?" he was asked.

"I dunno," was his only answer.

About threats, the brother was equally close-mouthed. Although it is known that attempts had been made on Curcio's life. His only comment on this was, "My brother he was good man."

Curcio was well liked and respected in Sewickley. He was president of the Sons of Italy, a member of the Elks and recently had been active in the organization of a Hoover booster club. He was also a Mason.

MYSTERIOUS SUSPECT NOT DAPPER KILLER

County detectives hunting the slayer of Dr. Harry R. Dapper, Carrick physician, lured to his death in Mifflin township last August 20, came back to the starting point today.

The "mysterious" suspect, shadowed by detectives for a week, was exonerated when a likewise mysterious patient, in the physician's office when he left with the slayer, failed to identify him as the man who enticed the physician five miles from his home to administer to "a sick wife."

Renewed interest in the hunt for the killer developed today following the appropriation of a $5,000 reward by the Board of Allegheny County Commissioners. This increases the total reward offered to $6,250, Henry R. Dapper, father of the physician having previously offered $1,000 and the Pittsburgh Motor Club $250. Several "free-lance" investigators were reported at work on the case.

TOWN HALL COMMITTEE NOT CONSIDERING SITE

Declaring his belief that before assistance is given in picking a site for Pittsburgh's proposed Town Hall a request for such aid should come from the County Commissioners, George S. Davison, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Town Hall Committee, suggests that the committee be discharged.

Mr. Davison's suggestion is carried to the directors of the chamber in a letter. Mr. Davison says:

"I have been so busy since my return from Europe a few weeks ago that I have not been able to call together the so-called Town Hall committee. Therefore, I am writing on my own responsibility and without the sanction of the committee.

"On behalf of the committee I take great pleasure in stating that the committee has accomplished everything that could have been desired up to the point of selecting a site. I feel that it would be a mistake for the committee to function further simply under the resolution which created it.

"It may be that the board of directors of the chamber may seen an opportunity for having the chamber assist in determining the site for the auditorium. I believe that the County Commissioners should first signify a desire to have such assistance. I have no suggestion to make as to how an expression from the Commisisoners may be had."

MAINE PROVES STRAW VOTE CORRECT

By CHARLES N. WHEELER,
(Noted Political Analyst.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Accuracy of the nation-wide poll being taken by the Hearst newspapers is written all over the results of the Maine election yesterday.

This is the only state test that can be made of the straw vote before the national election. But if the canvass in the other states discloses the same degree of reliability the final tabulations on the eve of election will foretell the national result to a T.

In the Hearst poll of the state to date, three indications stand out clearly:

1. That the Hoover and Smith strength is divided in the percentage ratio of 65 and a small decimal for Hoover and 34 plus for Smith.

2. That the total vote this year is likely to be somewhat larger than ever before.

3. That the Democratic women are bolting the party ticket in droves.

POLL FORECAST RATIO

With 34 precincts yet to hear from as this is written, Gardner, Republican candidate for governor, has a total of 144,242, and Moran, his Democratic opponent, 64,754. The percentage ratio divides approximately 69 for the Republicans and 31 for the Democrats. The Hearst poll today gives Hoover 4,384, and Smith 2,355.

That is, the Hearst poll shows Smith running about 4 per cent stronger in the national poll of the state than the Democratic candidate for governor registered Tuesday.

This is quite likely. Moran, the gubernatorial candidate, while standing for the Houston ticket without equivocation, is not as wet as Gov. Smith. So far as the drys were concerned, there was only one place for them to go and that was to Gardner, who stood squarely on the Hoover acceptance speech.

It is a fair assumption that Gov. Smith, at the close of the heated national struggle, will get a slightly better vote in the towns and cities, which seemed to disclose a degree of apathy with respect to Moran.

Increase in the Tuesday vote is also likely when the totals are tabulated next November, so that a 4 per cent difference in the percentages as between the Tuesday vote and the probable vote in November is just about the right slant.

HEARST POLL ACCURATE

With respect to the total vote Tuesday, the Hearst poll was 100 per cent accurate.

Some confusion has been caused by comparing the gubernatorial elections with national year votes. But in any way the final figures are set up, the Tuesday totals show that Gardner received the largest plurality ever given a Republican candidate for governor in the state, and that the total vote Tuesday, though for state officers and United States senator only, was larger than the total vote cast for the national tickets in both 1920 and 1924.

With 34 precincts still missing, the total vote Tuesday was 208,996. The missing precincts should bring the total to at least 210,000.

In the 1920 national election, the total vote was 195,316 (for Harding and Cox). This is roughly 15,000 less than the total Tuesday.

In the 1924 national election, the total vote for Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette was 191,786. Tuesday's vote was approximately 19,000 greater than this, although 42,000 less than the governorship vote that year.

Take the pluralities:

Two years ago the Republican candidate for governor was elected by a plurality of 20,028, as against an indicated plurality for Gardner Tuesday of about 80,000.

Four years ago, in the national election, Brewster, Republican for governor, defeated Pattangall, Democrat, with a plurality of 36,655, or about 44,000 less than the Republican plurality Tuesday.

Take the national pluralities, as compared with Tuesday's gubernatorial figures:

COOLIDGE VOTE BIGGER

Coolidge's majority over Davis and LaFollette was 85,094, as against 80,000 Republican Tuesday.

In 1920 Harding's plurality was 77,394 as against Tuesday 80,000.

Still another interesting tabulation shows the slump in the Democratic vote for governor in the last three elections, as follows:

1924—Pattingall, 108,626.
1926—McLean, 80,748.
1928—Moran, 65,000.

And it is in the slump the Democrats suffered Tuesday in their total vote that is verified the Hearst poll indication of a switch of Democratic dry women to Hoover. Analysis of Tuesday's figures by the experts on the ground bears out this forecast as read in the Hearst figures.

All the dispatches yesterday from the seat of the debacle carried the explanation that the Democratic women helped to roll up the unprecedented plurality for the Republican ticket.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads —Dissolve Them

Squeezing out blackheads makes large, ugly pores. The safe and sane way to get rid of these blemishes is to dissolve them. Get two ounces of Calonite powder from your drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub over the blackheads, and every one, big or little, will disappear at once.

CONFESS 24 SAFE CRACKINGS, 27 AUTO THEFTS

3 ARRESTED HERE SHOW POLICE PLACES ROBBED

Three alleged members of a safecracking gang are being held by city detectives while the sleuths, co-operating with state police, check their activities of the last several months. The checkup is expected to show that the trio were responsible for five safe robbing jobs in the city, 15 in the Beaver Valley and four in McKees Rocks.

The prisoners said they were Leroy Madden, 22, of 204 Paulson avenue, John Meckley, 24, of 721½ Whitney avenue, Wilkinsburg and Edward McCallin, 26, of 6820 Simonton street. Meckley was arrested Tuesday morning when, it is charged, he attempted to stage a holdup in a garage at Bakerstown and the two others were taken into custody yesterday by State Troopers I. D. Kelley and Harry Stemett and Detectives Edward O'Rourke and George Franz.

27 AUTOS STOLEN

The police say that the men have admitted the five safe jobs here and in addition stole $75 from the cash register of the Bluestone Drug Company store at Shady and Kentucky avenues. They also stole 27 automobiles, three of them in the city. The Pittsburgh machines were sold in Detroit and the others disposed of in Wellsville, O.

BEAVER VALLEY JOBS

A trip of inspection was made early today to Ambridge and Economy, where the three pointed out to detectives places they had entered. Among the establishments robbed were the Economy Drug Company, Fourteenth street, Economy, where $375 and stamps were taken from a safe the night of April 28; the Marisols Furniture Company, Ambridge, where $5,700 was obtained from the safe the night of March 6, and the Droz Drug Company in Ambridge, where a safe was cracked and $1,000 stolen.

Attempted to Rob Woman Bowler, Police Say

Caught, police say, in an attempt to steal the purse of Mrs. T. Maines, of 2333 Library road, Overbrook, John Sherwood, 42, of Philadelphia, was held until police arrived. Mrs. Maines was bowling in the Liberty National Bowling alleys, 925 Liberty avenue, when Sherwood is alleged to have attempted the theft.

While attending a street fair in Chateau street, Sylvester T. Marcipia of 15 Dartmouth avenue, reported his purse containing $5 was stolen from his pocket.

3 AUTOS CRASH; TWO INJURED

Two men were injured and three automobiles wrecked last night when the driver of one of the machines attempted to pass around the left side of a street car in Carson street near the Corliss tunnel.

Alcerio Marcantonio, of Aliquippa, suffered a broken nose and his car was wrecked. He is said to have driven around a trolley, struck a parked automobile and then struck another machine traveling in the opposite direction. Guy Monsone, a passenger in Marcantonio's car, was cut and bruised. Marcantonio was arrested on charges of reckless driving and violating the automobile laws.

When an automobile started while she was cranking it in front of her home last night, Mrs. Anna Ross, 20, of 1846 Noble street, Sharpsburg, was seriously injured. She was removed to St. Francis Hospital, where it was said she had suffered a fractured right leg and internal injuries.

TAKE DOCTOR IN GIRL'S DEATH

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 12.—(A.P.)—Sought in connection with the death of a young woman whose body was found in his office here, Dr. Otto Fisher, of Keyser, was taken into custody last evening at Woodstock, Va. The coroner's jury reported that the young woman, Miss Lonnie Beckone, of Harrisonburg, Va., died after an illegal operation.

Attorney S. Gassaway Shores yesterday found a note under his office door asking him to go to Dr. Fosher's office. On his arrival there he found the girl's body.

DOCTOR INJURED HANGING OUT LINE

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 12.—Hanging a clothes line is not part of the curriculum leading to an M. D. degree. W. H. Brown, with such a degree, has built up a good practice in Youngwood, but when he took time out to help his wife on wash day he fell upon evil ways. Dr. Brown, in endeavoring to hang a clothes line while standing on a box, slipped, striking his head against the side of the house. Now he has a broken jaw and a nonclothesline hanging M. D. is working over him.

BANK CLERK HELD UP, ROBBED DOWNTOWN

H. F. Thompson, clerk of the Duquesne National Bank, was walking along Liberty avenue, near Fancourt street last night when three Negroes held him up, robbed him of $20, a watch and a gold pin, he reported to police.

The Vulcan Crucible Steel Company has purchased from the Russel Shovel Company, through George Brothers, approximately five acres of land adjoining the present Vulcan plant. The property fronts on the Ohio River and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad.

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 12.—The Pennsylvania railroad has placed an electric-gasoline coach in operation between Butler and Kiskiminetas Junction. BUTLER TO GO SLOW ON HEALTH ORDINANCE

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 12.—City Health Officer J. Fred Leetch has called attention of council to an ordinance that requires all handlers of milk to obtain health certificates every six months. About 500 persons are said to be affected by the ordinance. Council is giving the matter study before ordering enforcement.

"There are 125 employees in the service organization—"

When Schenley Apartments is the subject of discussion, someone is bound to make this remark. It is a terse, graphic manner of describing an elaborate service system.

The number of attendants is a point of interest—it seems large. But there is not one too many. The service is scientifically constructed to meet every household demand of more than 200 of Pittsburg's prominent families.

Moreover, Schenley service aims—and succeeds—at banishing the worries and perplexities of the servant problem of this day and age.

*Then, too, the service of Hotel Schenley, as adapted to apartment requirements, is a great convenience, especially for dining and entertaining. * * * And the fine shops on the ground floor, of diversified character, instantly responsive to orders given by the house phones.*

There is no better manner of living than is afforded in

Flapper Defended by Lindsey After Witnessing Screening Of "Our Dancing Daughters"

"OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS," according to Judge Ben Lindsey, noted Juvenile Court jurist, carries a stirring message to parents as well as to the youth of today. After seeing the screen presentation of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, Judge Lindsey said he had been deeply impressed by the theme of the picture and that the lessons it taught are well to be considered.

"There are two striking lessons to be gleaned from this ambitious film production," Judge Lindsey declared. "One is for the parents. The other is for their boys and girls."

The parents, the famous jurist counseled, should observe the results of home environment as shown in the feature production.

"One group of parents in the screen play are the old-fashioned, prudish and iron-willed type," he said. "They have not the confidence of their children. There is no frankness in their dealings with their own flesh and blood. They are tyrannical, not sympathetic. They share none of the problems of their children. Therefore their advice is never sought. Naturally, the children seek companionship elsewhere. They have been schooled in their home to deception and secretiveness.

"It is not at all surprising, then, that we see the son carrying on an affair with a married woman and generally misbehaving. Nor it is surprising to us to see the daughter committing indiscretions.

"The other group of parents, on the other hand, maintain a sympathetic understanding with their flapper daughter. She is not afraid to sip a cocktail or smoke a cigaret in her own home. She does not hesitate to invite her friends into her home and enjoys a social freedom that only complete frankness with the parents could permit.

"They do not have to worry about their daughter or spy upon her. They know the girl. There are no secrets in this very modern household. The parents realize that a 'dancing daughter' is just as good as her more prim grandmother and that her sophistication is a protection rather than a weakening influence. And when real love comes into her life she is able to accept it whole-heartedly and without any misgivings for future happiness."

For youth, Judge Lindsey declares, there is the lesson of restraint and honesty of living.

"There is," he asserted, "the girl whose conscience forces her to tell the man she is about to marry that there have been other men in her life. This is a question that is very difficult to answer. Should she have told or should she have gone to the altar with sealed lips? Personally, I do not believe in entering into such a sacred contract as marriage with a lie locked in one's heart. This girl, I believe, answered the problem in the modern way. And being a modern man, he forgave and forgot.

"Then there is the other girl who married, not for love, but for convenience. This abuse of the marital vows is not uncommon in the world we are living today. The fate of this girl should be ample warning to any young woman who seeks to hold a man only through physical attraction. Such a union is doomed before it is entered upon. It is one of deceit, falseness, lies and legalized immorality. It cannot endure.

"The third girl, the gay modern 'dancing daughter' who has enjoyed life but whose love of enjoyment has been misunderstood, strikes a new keynote in the lesson of youth. Of the three she is the most wholesome and worthy of a good man and a good home. She is ready to take up the responsibilities of matrimony and proves that, despite the jazz-mad pace she had led, she is just as pure at heart as the girl with curls and crinolines of the past generations."

The ultra-modern production, which Harry Beaumont directed, is a screen sermon with the modern generation as a text, Judge Lindsey said, and represents a cross-section of the problems that confront both parents and children today.

"I have been greatly impressed by this sincerity of this splendid presentation," the jurist continued. "As a moral lesson it reaches into every American home and brings some problem for us to study. Every parent and child will find something very personal, I am sure, in this picture. It is delightful entertainment and a striking defense of the younger generation."

DINERS TO HEAR HARDWARE SALE PLAN

Fifteen hundred Western Pennsylvania hardware dealers will hear presented in a new manner the benefits to both merchant and consumer that come from the policy of selling a standard article at a standard price, when they meet at a banquet tonight at McCreery's.

The banquet is one of a series being held through the co-operation of hardware dealers' associations and the Dover Manufacturing Company.

Experts in the details of what is termed a new era in hardware merchandising are explaining at the meetings the field that is open to the hardware dealer particularly in the electrical appliance line.

Harry Fisher, assistant to the president of the Dover Manufacturing Company, is one of those largely responsible for the success of the present merchandising campaign, which was started in Cleveland, continued in Detroit, and from here will be carried on to Philadelphia.

The speakers scheduled for the banquet tonight include Mr. Fisher, J. E. McCullough, president of the Retail Hardware Dealers' Association of Pittsburgh; George E. Whitewell, manager of sales and service of the Philadelphia Company; Charles T. Johnson Vea, president of the Dover Manufacturing Company; W. N. Vea, its vice president; Matt R. Vea, assistant to the president, and Roy Soule, editor of the Hardware Dealers' Magazine.

BEST SUIT LOST IN RESCUE, 'SQUIRE' ASKS COUNTY PAY

Justice of the Peace Chester A. Wyke, Bridgeville, is without a "best suit." In fact, he has been without a Sunday suit since the Cow Hollow Bridge, near Bridgeville, collapsed nearly two months ago.

When the span gave way the 'Squire rushed to the aid of several injured men. In the rescue work 'Squire Wyke's clothes became soiled. In a letter to County Commissioners he asked the county to buy him a new suit. The bridge is owned by the county, and the county is morally liable, he wrote.

"I ruined my only best suit, wrote the 'Squire. "Don't you think you should buy me another one?"

The suit, according to 'Squire Wyke, cost $75. No action on the request was taken by the Commissioners.

How To Be Beautiful
by Maria Jeritza

Powders and Powder Puffs

POWDER is a delight to the average woman. If you doubt this, just watch, at the next opportunity, a woman artfully applying her powder puff to her nose.

MARIA JERITZA

She obviously gets as much concentrated joy and satisfaction out of the process and result, as the cat does from washing its face.

Some authorities maintain that powder is bad for the skin because it blocks the pores. It would seem, judging by excavations recently dug up, that the ladies of Kish, Mesopotamia, of 3,000 B. C., and other ancient civilizations, got as much fun out of their pretty vanity cases, manicure sets, hand-mirrors, rouge and powder as do the flappers of 1928. There has never been a civilization presumably, in which women did not try to adorn themselves, to make themselves more attractive to men. So why waste energy in advising against the use of powder and the artistic use of rouge, in cases where they really enhance instead of detract from a woman's appearance. As well advise water not to run downhill, or men not to go fishing! And by the way fish-hooks 3,000 years old, used in the bubbling brooks of ancient days, have also come to light!

A perfect skin does not need powder or rouge. But few women have the perfect complexion. The nearer perfect your skin-texture is, the less make-up you will need, in order to give the desired illusion of beauty. Please remember, won't you, that too much make-up is far worse than none at all, because it gives the impression of age, rather than of youth. Remember, also make-up cannot create beauty. Beneath artfully applied powder and a possible touch of rouge there must be a naturally lovely skin, in order to create the appearance of loveliness.

Warm water, cold water and nightly use of the right cold cream should, provided your health is good, keep your skin clear, your pores fine and free from impurities.

In choosing face powder and rouge, select a standard grade in shades that match your own natural color. Mauve and green and silver powder may sound thrilling, but their use will be more likely to make you look sickly than exotic.

At some beauty shops, they permit a customer, in buying rouge and powder, to try various shades until she discovers the tint that matches her coloring by a good clear light similar to that in which the powder will be used. Flesh, Rachel and Naturelle are three well-known shades suited to very fair, medium and brunette complexions respectively. But these powder tints vary in different makes.

Experiment is the best test. You may even have to blend two shades to get the becoming hue of natural health you wish. Be careful not to select a powder of heavier texture than your skin will carry well. If you do, blocked, stretched pores and whiteheads or blackheads may result.

Rouge should be chosen to blend with the natural red of your cheeks or lips. The desired shade can be obtained by rubbing your skin. Beware the combination of red lip rouge and orange cheek rouge. Mother nature doesn't arrange clashes of color and the result will be grotesque. Place powder and rouge on your face where your own natural color is indicated, however faintly.

Last, but by no means least in importance, keep your powder puffs and rouge pads scrupulously clean by scrubbing them in warm soap suds, rinsing and drying them every few days. This measure is essential to a clear, beautiful complexion.

MADE WONDERFUL CHANGE IN HER

Lady Says; So Grateful Wants Public to Know What Ten Herbs Did for Her.

"Ten Herbs has made a wonderful change in me," was the statement of Mrs. Jennie Nolte, Route 1, Coraopolis, Pa., (near Pittsburgh), to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this great natural medicine to large crowds. "I want to tell the public what your medicine has done for me," Mrs. Nolte continued. "I had become so nervous that the least thing would excite me, and I slept poorly. I had lost my appetite, and the little I ate did not digest properly. Gas would form, and I would get so nauseated that I would almost vomit. A lump would form, and I would have water brash. My tongue was coated, and I had such severe dizzy spells that if I stooped over everything would get black in front of me. Occasionally there were pains across my back and I would have a siege of rheumatism. These pains would shoot from my ankles to my shoulders.

MRS. JENNIE NOLTE

"I was completely worn out when I learned about Ten Herbs and started using it. Now even friends note the great change in me. I have a better appetite, and can enjoy my meals without fear of the terrible misery afterwards, as I do not have gas, bloating, or nauseated feeling. That lump does not form, and there is no more water brash. My bowels are regular and dizzy spells are gone. My liver seems to be working properly. Pains have left my back, and only occasionally do I feel a slight rheumatic twinge. I have new strength and ambition. I sleep more soundly and feel better in every way, and that is why I gladly endorse Ten Herbs to the public."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

Tobacco Smoked Centuries Ago

RELICS have been found in Celebes which seem to prove that tobacco was used for smoking in that island as long ago as the dawn of the Christian era.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE PARIS DIVORCEE

GO to the Paris Widow, thou simple one! Consider her ways and be thoughtful.

* * *

For a real widow may be sad at heart; but a little divorcee is a cheerful loser. Verily, verily, she passeth lightly over the Great Divide into the Happy Hunting Grounds; for she carryeth with her all the charms of widowhood and none of its regrets.

* * *

Her "past" is as a sealed verdict which arouseth a man's curiosity and her future is a fascinating adventure in an unknown country.

She confideth her "troubles" unto each man and sigheth for "sympathy." A tear trembleth in her right eye, while a wink twinkleth in her left.

HELEN ROWLAND

She appealeth unto a man's chivalry, she geteth upon his easy side, she awakeneth his protective instinct.

She is SO helpless! And abused!

* * *

And lo, every man's heart is her phonograph, whereon she playeth whatsoever tune she liketh.

* * *

What though she hath made one or TWO men miserable? Still will a third and a fourth cheerfully follow in their footsteps, nor fear the briars and quicksands.

* * *

For, men are as a flock of goats. Where one leadeth the others hasten to follow. And it doth appear that to make all men eager to marry thee thou must first have made ONE man sorry.

* * *

Verily, unto her that hath HAD, many husbands shall be given, even as unto Peggy Joyce!

* * *

Behold, a spinster is an unknown quantity and a widow is an heirloom; but a multiple-divorcee is a hand-me-down. Yet, even as a babe delighteth to play with scissors and with matches, so does a man delight to pass a "danger" signal and to wager his happiness on a long shot.

* * *

He is as a puppy that pursueth a wasp thinking it a butterfly—and is STUNG! He is as a motorist that seeketh to beat the engine at a railroad crossing!

* * *

Go to. A woman may divorce ONE husband for a good reason. But she that divorceth many husbands is an ADDICT!

* * *

For surely, surely in the Garden of Love not ALL the fruit are lemons! And, peradventure, an husband is no better and no worse than other men.

* * *

Wherefore, then, do men seem always to prefer the food and the woman which will most disagree with them? Even one whose heart is like unto a barber shop in which the cry is always "NEXT!" SELAH!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, September 13

WHILE many of the planetary operations point to success and good fortune, yet the perverse aspect of Saturn in square aspect with Luna portends stubborn situations to be overcome by firm resolution and perseverance. Although the fulfillment of cherished aims and purposes may be temporarily obstructed or may meet with postponements or delays, it is probable that eventually all will be well. Both personal and business conditions will be lively.

Those whose birthday it is are under a fortunate sway for the year, but nevertheless there may be obstacles and delays to swerve the energies temporarily from the cherished course. Perseverance and patience will eventually win out. A child born on this day may have qualities and opportunities for success and good fortune, but these must be mastered by diligence and persistency.

Bubbles -:- -:- -:- By Truda Dahl

LITTLE DAN is having the time of his life! Sometimes he forgets his more serious problems and sits down to do nothing but enjoy himself. What a youthful creature he is, for who else but someone very young would want to blow bubbles for enjoyment. But look! His mind is still on his job, for when the bubbles float through the air, each one contains the picture of one of his subjects—probably the ones who are taking most of his time at present.

And then an idea strikes him! He'll waft the bubbles from the magic pipe and send them direct to the heart of the one he's selected for her life partner. They won't be as sharp as darts, but they'll answer the purpose much better and one's usually watching for darts, but never in the world will suspect a bright, gleaming bubble.

And the mischievous little imp chuckles in glee at this thought, as he watches the love-bubbles start on the journey that will end when they enter the Haven of Hearts.

Madge Relates the Incident of the Miniature

THE fingers of Princess Olina's lovely hands were clenched into her palms, and her eyes held a lively look of terror as she spoke of the mysterious "something" which was troubling her. I did not wish to force her confidence, but my conscience forbade me to finish our interview without another and more definite offer to help her. When she made her first appeal to me to listen to her story, saying that she "must tell somebody," I was very sure that she was actuated by terror of the men in the shack. But later she had said she would not "bother" me now with the thing that was frightening her. I wondered if she had imagined some lack of sympathy on my part and opened my lips upon a plea to tell me what was troubling her. But she forestalled me with a question which evidently had been in the back of her mind all through our interview.

"You said a little while ago," she began, "that until today you had doubts of my identity because my nose was not the Rapsburg one characteristic of my family. How did you find out the truth today?"

Her great, velvety eyes were searching my face and I could evade the truth no longer. But I hoped that not yet would she suspect that I had discovered the thin code-written paper in the secret compartment of her miniature case.

"I deceived you a few minutes ago," I began slowly, steadily, "for I thought you were too nervously upset to hear the truth. But I must give you a truthful answer to a direct question. When you loosened your miniature case in your agitation at hearing of your old nurse's illness, it was not caught in your clothing. Instead it fell upon the floor of the library, flew open and displayed your mother's miniature. My maid found it and gave it to me as soon as I returned home, and I brought it back and put it into your dress, hoping you would not have to know that it had been away from your person. But no harm has been done. Your secret is as safe as it was before."

She made no outcry at the revelation, but her face had whitened and her eyes dilated as I talked. When I had finished she spoke in a husky whisper.

"Does your—maid—know—who—I—am?"

I smiled involuntarily at the remembrance of Katie's theory, and I saw resentment creep into the girl's horror-filled eyes.

"No, indeed," I returned promptly. "I hope you will feel like laughing when I tell you that Katie is sure that you are the head of a gang of jewel thieves to which the Transvanians in the shack back of the farmhouse belong, and that the miniature is only part of your loot. She is also convinced that we at the farmhouse shall be murdered in our beds for our few possessions. She has had a long training in movie attendance, and believes everything she sees."

Purposely I kept my eyes averted from her face as I spoke, but I heard a little involuntary gasp as I spoke of the shack vagabonds. But she had had a rigorous training in controlling her emotions, and I was not surprised to hear her give a little laugh, though a strained one, when I finished my explanation of Katie's theory.

"I wonder you didn't have the same theory," she said, and her tone was not entirely one of levity.

"Not after seeing you, my dear," I said, and she flushed with pleasure. "I knew as soon as I saw your mother's face in that costly setting that only her daughter would be carrying it next her heart. Then you exclaimed 'My mother's miniature,' and confirmed my guess. I could not explain your nose until you gave me the clue, but I knew that you must be Olina. But how ingenious your mother must have been to cover your absence so cleverly. All America sympathized with her as you ostensibly were carried on board ship desperately ill and swathed in blankets."

"Yes, I'm afraid my maid must have had rather an uncomfortable time of it." Princess Olina commented, with a little smile which changed to a worried expression as she looked up at me. "But, tell me, what is to be done now? Do you feel that it is your duty to write to my mother?"

An Irregular Pulse May Follow Illness

(Second Heart Article)

IT IS not uncommon to compare the human body to a delicate and perfectly made machine. In many respects the comparison is a good one, but it can be carried too far.

DR. COPELAND

I recall an electric light plant newly installed in a hospital where I served. We would set a nickel on edge on any stationary part and there was not sufficient vibration to disturb the coin. The machine operated perfectly.

You must not expect the heart to be so regular in its function. It was never intended to be. But it can adjust itself to the varying conditions of existence, overcoming obstacles, making its own repairs, replacing worn parts, and never stopping its activity almost from conception to the very end of life.

The absolutely perfect heart in an absolutely perfect person is likely to be regular in its pulsations, going steadily along, quite deliberate in its action. If the pulse drops a beat now and then, is painfully slow, or suddenly develops speed like a race horse, the symptom deserves attention.

But one of the happenings is by no means a sign of something dangerous. It is probably due to some passing thing and is of no consequence whatever. Indeed, any one of these symptoms may be a chronic and ever-present condition and yet be of little importance.

There are lots of persons, really in pretty good health, who have considerable irregularity of the heart's action. The doctors give it a long, hard name—"arrhythmia." Of course, in simple language, this means nothing more than lack of rhythm.

It is not at all an uncommon thing to find that the pulse of young children and of young adults, too, is quite irregular. As they grow older, the heart settles down to perfect regularity.

After a severe attack of one of the fevers, the heart's rhythm may be disturbed for a time. Great care must be taken after certain diseases, for instance diphtheria and influenza. These ailments have a tendency to attack the heart muscles and sometimes they damage it seriously. Other fevers may disturb the heart for a time, but do it little real harm. The loss of rhythm is likely to be restored when recovery is complete.

Most of what we call the "functional irregularities" of the heart disappear as soon as the victim exercises vigorously. When I was a young doctor I was a United States Pension Examining Surgeon. One of our associates on the Board was a wonderful doctor. He knew more about the heart than any other physician I ever met.

The examining board met in my office, on the third floor of the building. When we had an ex-service man with an irregular heart, my colleague would direct him to run down the stairs to the street and return at once, walking rapidly up the stairs. It was surprising how many disturbed and irregular hearts would become steady as a clock after this rather strenuous exertion.

Of course, seriously diseased hearts would not be benefited by exercise. On the contrary, violent effort might do real harm. All the symptoms, including the irregularity, may be greatly increased by it.

Dyspepsia, anemia, excessive nervousness, the abuse of liquor, tobacco, tea or coffee, over-worry and overwork—these are among the causes of irregular action of the heart. Plenty of sleep and out-of-door life will help to restore health. Nothing is more important than the chewing of proper food with good teeth and leading the sort of existence we call "sensible living."

Tomorrow: Another article on the heart.

Answers to Health Queries

M. T. Q.—What do you advise for whiteheads?

A.—Correct the diet, by cutting down on sugar, starches and coffee. Eat simple food.

* * *

S. S. S. Q.—Some time ago I had a slight touch of tuberculosis. I have been pronounced cured. Do you think it would be all right for me to marry and have children?

A.—Yes, if a physician's examination of lungs would warrant no deleterious after-effects.

Delicious Peach Pie

Juicy Yellow Peaches—
Flaky brown pie crust

THIS WEEK ON THE

PENNSYLVANIA DINERS

Luscious! . . . No other word quite describes September peaches. They embody the very spirit of harvest-time—the "season of mists and mellow fruitfulness" that "fills all fruit with ripeness to the core."

The soft purple bloom on their cheeks tells of all the hoarded sunshine of a whole long golden summer.

Large peaches. Firm peaches. Tender peaches.

Peaches whose delicate scent serves as a swift whip even to the most laggard appetite . . . whose outpoured wealth of juice beguiles your tongue to talk of boyhood days.

Peeled, sliced and stoned, lightly sweetened with sugar, and baked between pie crusts that will melt in your mouth only less rapidly than the delectable fruit they envelop!

That's Fresh Peach Pie as prepared by the trained skilled chefs of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It's an excellent example of Pennsylvania cookery.

Ask for it—on Pennsylvania diners this week. It will give an added pleasure to your trip.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Miss Mary Armstrong Robinson Marries Henry Leslie Farmer Buswell in Church at Gloucester

JUST when one is singing over and over to himself that fall is here and the fall season is here, and that life will be gay, one suddenly comes to a day that may be a fall day, but not a gay day. With the exception of weddings and entertainments for brides and informal affairs, most of the events of the week are not really events yet, but just plans for events.

But when there are such interesting weddings as that of Mary Armstrong Robinson, daughter of William Henry Robinson, why become agitated at the paucity in variety of social events this week?

Mary and Henry Leslie Farmer Buswell, of Stillington Hall, Gloucester, son of the late Charles Buswells, of Yorkshire, England, were married at one of the most important weddings of the resort season yesterday in quaint St. John's Episcopal Church in Gloucester, the Robinson summer home, you know. A profusion of cibotium ferns and fall flowers decorated the church.

The Rev. Hugh Birkstead, of Philadelphia, assisted by the Rev. J. H. C. Cooper, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock under a floral arch of cedar and lilies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, William H. Robinson, was lovely in chiffon velvet, trimmed with old lace pointe auzleterre. She carried gardenias and lilies. Mrs. Thomas A. Robinson was her sister-in-law's matron of honor, and Elizabeth Jane Robinson was her sister's maid of honor, with June Armstrong Robinson, niece of the bride, as flower girl.

Mr. Buswell had as his best man John Hays Hammond, Jr. The ushers were William H. Robinson, Jr., of this city, of course; Luke Doyle and Charles Neagle, of New York; Harold Willis, of Boston; Robert Johnson, of New Jersey; Walter Yeats, of Manchester, Mass., and Howland Twombley, of Brookline, Mass.

And among those at the wedding were many of our "400." The H. G. Veeders and Greigg, James and Nicolas Veeder; the Grant Diberts, the H. H. McClintics, Margaret McClintic, Mrs. Dwight Armstrong, the Charles Dudleys, Barbara Dudley, the Carl Pierces, Mrs. Norwood Johnston, Clifford Heinz, the Howand Heinzes, the Dudley Liggetts and Mrs. A. J. Armstrong.

And following the wedding was a reception at "Rock-a-cress," the Robinson summer home. And the young Buswells have left for Europe. Upon their return they will be at home to their friends in Stillington Hall, Gloucester.

Mary is a graduate of Westover and a member of the Junior League. Mr. Buswell is the grandson of Admiral Croft, of Stillington Hall, Yorkshire, England, and he has given that same name to his beautiful home in Gloucester.

MOST girls become engaged and married a year or several years after their debuts, but Sarah Gillespie Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. Alfred Reed Hamilton, of Woodlawn road, didn't even wait to make her bow before plighting her troth. Sarah, you remember, is mentioned as one of the buds-to-be of this season. Well, her mother has just made known her engagement to Dr. George Fowler Wheeling, son of Dr. William Stuart Wheeling, of Windber Hospital, Windber, Pa. He is a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, and Sarah is a graduate of Rosemary Hall, at Greenwich, Conn.

And I'm very, very sure, Sarah will not come out as a debutante this fall, for the wedding will take plice the latter part of October at Bonny Leas Farm, the Hamilton summer home.

DURING the debutante season there's always a lot of visiting done. Girls one has gone to school with like to see one make one's bow, don't you find it so? Or at least they like to be "in" on some of the debut parties. Bettie Berger Dunlap, daughter of the Will Knox Dunlaps, of South Highland avenue, will have as her house guest the week of September 22, Elizabeth Campbell, of Evanston. Elizabeth will stop over here on her way to school at Smith College.

DOWN in Philadelphia a much feted young woman will be Sara Mary Barnes, daughter of the John Barnses, of "Four Winds," Haverford, who will wed Thomas Morrison, Jr., of this city, on October 6, in the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church. A buffet, following the rehearsal on Friday evening, October 5, will be given by Sara's parents.

Mrs. Geo. Dixon, Marsden St., Pittsburgh, says:
"Boiling isn't needed!"

"I never believed that Rinso could make clothes whiter than other soaps until my grocer got me to try it. It's marvelous! When I take the clothes out of the washer everything is so snowy and spotless that even boiling isn't needed.

"And I know those good, thick Rinso suds are safe. They stand up until the wash is done.

"The Rinso way is so easy—and so easy on my hands—that I use it for the dishes, floors, woodwork and everything. It's the best ever."

Mrs. Geo. Dixon,
190 Marsden St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Clothes wear longer, too

Millions use Rinso. Thousands, many of them your own neighbors, write us letters like the one above. "Dirt floats right off in Rinso suds" they say. "Better than bar soaps or chips" many write us. And others say "No softener needed"—"economical"—"suds last and last!"

The makers of 34 leading washers say, "Use Rinso for safety and for whiter washes." Great for tub washing, too; soaks out the dirt and saves the clothes. Get the big household package from your grocer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HOT AIR HARRY

By BARRY O'DELL.

HARRY COTTRELL, salesman for the Acme Insurance Company, was a "hot air merchant," and gloried in it. So far as his fellow salesmen knew, Harry's only tangible assets were a well set up figure, an ingratiating smile, and a "good line of chatter." Yet with this equipment, he was able to maintain the appearance of a care-free young millionaire.

To his associates in the office, Cottrell frequently expounded his philosophy of life, and the morning "pep" meetings were often further enlivened by accounts of how he bluffed creditors and managed to play the part of a scion of wealth on "nothing" per year.

"You know, fellows," exclaimed Harry one day to the rest of the force, "I think a man's crazy to work just for a living when there are hundreds—thousands—of girls, just dying to get married. Believe me, I'm going to catch some girl with plenty of jack, and help her spend it. No more collectors, no more bills, nothing to do but have a good time. How's that for a scheme?"

"But," queried Bob Lord, the office "slow-poke," "suppose the girl you loved didn't have any money?"

"Love! Ha! Ha! Ha! That's a hot one," ejaculated Cottrell. "Love went out with the Spanish War. The only thing that counts nowadays is the 'bacon' and lots of it."

"Do you think that's quite fair to the girl, though?" pursued Bob.

"Why not? She'll never know I'm not crazy about her. A fellow's a poor stick that can't pull the wool over a woman's eyes. Listen, old man—" he continued, laying his hand patronizingly on Lord's shoulders, "Why don't you wake up and step out a little? You wouldn't be a bad looking gink if you had a decent suit of clothes and a hair cut, and you could grab off some lonesome girlie yourself. There's nothing to it, my boy."

Bob shook his head slightly, and sighed as he turned away to his desk. Perhaps—he reflected his ideas were a trifle archaic in this day and age. Fellows like Harry Cottrell seemed to get by, and have a good time in the bargain. Still a fellow had to play the hand that was dealt him; live up to his own ideals of life. As for getting a "decent suit of clothes" and stepping out a bit—out of the question till his mother's funeral expenses were paid. The hair cut though—that could be accomplished at once. He had let himself run a little bit too much to seed in the year since his mother's death.

One morning Cottrell ran into the office in a fever of excitement. "Hey, Lord!" he called out: "Remember old man Spurgeon and his daughter? The old fellow we sold that big life policy to, last summer? Well, I ran into them yesterday. They're back in town again for a few weeks. Came all the way from Los Angeles so the girl could do a little shopping. Believe me, boy, I wasn't slow in offering my services as escort and general all-around factotum while they're here. It's the big chance I've been looking for. Think of it! A ranch in California, oodles of money, and they're just a couple of boobs. If Sadie Spurgeon isn't Mrs. Harry Cottrell by the time they're ready to go back to California, I'll eat my hat."

Finally one morning, Cottrell burst in with the announcement, "Well, it's all over but the shouting boys! They're going back to Los Angeles on the limited this afternoon. I heard the old man say last night, that he had some business to attend to, before they left, so it's up to little Harry to take her down to the station and see her aboard the train. I proposed to her last night, and she's to give me my answer when I see her today.

No one in the salesman's room heard the outer door open and no one except the girl at the switchboard, saw the tall old man who strode to her desk and inquired for "Mr. Cottrell."

"Who shall I say?" asked the girl.

Before the caller could reply, Harry's voice rang out clearly from the inner office, "Believe me, fellows; when I marry Sadie and get my hands on some of the dough old Spurgeon has, I'll make the Los Angeles hicks sit up and take notice."

The old man started slightly, then turned to the girl.

Early that afternoon, Cottrell alighted from a taxi at the Spurgeon's hotel.

Miss Spurgeon admitted him to her quarters in evident surprise and embarrassment.

"Why—Mr. Cottrell!" she exclaimed, as he strode through the doorway. "Didn't Dad see you, this morning?"

Harry didn't answer. He couldn't; for he was staring in dumb surprise, at the other occupant of the sitting room. It was Bob Lord; but a neat and well-groomed Bob, far different from "slow-poke" at the office.

"You see, Mr. Cottrell," explained Sadie, "Bob—Mr. Lord and I have been corresponding ever since Dad and I were here last Summer. After you left last night, Bob came—" a vivid blush suffused her features, "I don't know how it happened, but we decided to get married today. Dad likes Bob very much and he's going to make him manager of our Los Angeles property. I thought it would be less embarrassing for all of us, if Dad stopped in and told you about it this morning, but he evidently missed you."

"Well, old man," broke in Bob, "We were just starting for The Little Church Around the Corner, when you called. Mr. Spurgeon is waiting for us there. So, if you'll excuse us—Say!" he added as an afterthought, "How would you like to act as best man?"

"Eer—uh—no thanks," stammered Harry.

Cottrell watched them drive away in the taxi that he had first hired, and for once in his life, the "hot air merchant" was at a loss for words.

The Prince of Wales — His Story.

Carries Uncommon Fashions And Is Imitated All Over the World

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

His Royal Highness, Edward, Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, was born in 1894. Guilty of much mischief during his childhood days he was often punished. When he grew older he was sent to Osborn Naval College and later to Oxford. During the World War he became a captain in the Army and went to France, but was not permitted to get into the actual fighting. After the war he made his first tour of Canada and then visited the United States. In recent years he has been vastly amused by efforts of matchmaking friends to find him a bride.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

EDWARD P.

By WALTER and LEONARD TOWNSEND

CHAPTER XIX.

PARTLY due to the spirit of the age; partly on account of the departure from tradition in his youthful upbringing; but more particularly owing to the innate assertiveness which is distinctly present in the Prince's character—these are the three factors which account for the change which has taken place in the attitude and outlook for our present Prince of Wales compared with that of his predecessors.

PRINCE OF WALES

All this being so, the Prince's conduct when at home in London is not remarkable. He employs his own methods of working; he accepts or rejects the proposals made to him on their own merit; he deviates from his original program if circumstances warrant, and he rarely hesitates to cancel one engagement if a more important function demands his presence. During a very harassing and strenuous part of one of the Prince's tours in the east of England, news reached him that his brother, Prince Henry, had been suddenly indisposed by an attack of influenza and would be unable to attend and speak at a dinner for which he had made definite arrangements.

On hearing this, the Prince of Wales, at great personal inconvenience, immediately motored over in time to take Prince Henry's place at the dinner, and though he did not think he would be able to return in time to complete his own ceremony, he motored back without rest and thus kept his own over-full program intact.

The Prince of Wales has been called the best-dressed man in the world. This is, of course, a vulgar exaggeration. He dresses well, of course, and is a worthy model to copy in the matter of dress for his is the acme of good quiet taste and gentlemanly refinement.

The Prince of Wales takes an intelligent and lively interest in his wardrobe, and though he has definite ideas of his own, particularly cuts and styles—and occasionally overrules the advice of his tailor and valet—no one can accuse him of too much originality on this score. He follows his own tastes to a large extent, but a feature of his garments is their masculinity.

Although the Prince requires the services of two valets, he personally superintends his own

Honestly, now, if you were asked, could you tell the name of the traffic patrolman on your corner, the one who speaks to you when you pass by? Three Pittsburgh women were elected county officers at the afternoon session. They are Mrs. Elizabeth J. Gibson, president; Mrs. R. H. Hood, vice president, and Mrs. Jennie W. DeVinney, corresponding secretary. The convention will end this afternoon. More than 100 women were present yesterday.

COOLIDGES BACK IN WASH.

By GEORGE E. DURNO.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Tanned and invigorated by a summer in the Wisconsin woods, President and Mrs. Coolidge returned to Washington at 8:28 o'clock today.

They were met at the station by Secretaries Kellogg and Dwight Davis, Attorney General Sargent, Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential nominee; Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican National Committee, government officials and a fair-sized crowd.

The President smiled and greeted friends affably before entering his automobile for the drive to the White House.

James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, was a member of the presidential party, having boarded the special train in Pennsylvania.

The Coolidges found the White House somewhat changed since they left in June. A new tin roof was put on the executive offices, the drive to the office was widened, a new tile floor was laid in the kitchen and all the rooms in the mansion were cleaned and brightened.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will remain here but a week or 10 days before leaving again for a visit to the old home in Vermont.

Both were smiling broadly as they arrived at the mansion. Mrs. Coolidge waved to a small group which had gathered to greet them.

MARRIES SOPHOMORE

After years of roaming, Charles R. Prettyman, 39, better known to circus followers and theater-goers as "Jeff" of "Mutt and Jeff," has taken unto himself a wife and settled down in McMechen, near Wheeling, W. Va. The girl, last year a high school sophomore, is Victoria Yanosh.

$1,000,000 GREENSBURG HIGH SCHOOL TOO SMALL

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 12.—Greensburg's new high school, completed last year at a cost of $1,000,000, is too small. The auditorium is being used as a study room owing to the heavy enrollment this year. The building now houses 1,256 pupils.

AIRPORT'S SITE TO BE DEBATED

The County Commissioners have invited a special committee of City Council, consisting of Robert Garland, Harry Little and P. J. McArdle, to meet with them in the commissioners' conference room to discuss the selection of the site for the proposed $2,000,000 municipal airport.

The airport committee of the Chamber of Commerce, the County Planning Commission and Norman F. Brown, director of Public Works, all recommend that the airport be located in Moon township. Forty-two sites were inspected before this recommendation was reached.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners yesterday, Joseph G. Armstrong said the site should embrace at least 1,000 acres. Charles C. McGovern objected to immediate action and suggested that all aviators and others familiar with aeronautics be invited to meet with the commissioners before the final site selection should be made.

It was decided to hold such a meeting some time following next week's conference with the City Council Committee.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

ONE-EYED CONNOLLY, who has achieved a certain sort of notoriety as a gate crasher of some dimensions, was walking along Sixth avenue, near Grant street. He wears spectacles and the peak of his cap is an awning for an ear. His cap is always askew that way. One-Eye was not at all exuberant. He said he was so out of sorts that he didn't intend making the rounds of the sporting editors of the town. Usually, he does this to get a little publicity in most cases, but in others to say "hello" to some of the boys who have befriended him in small ways from time to time. But he had a very bad toothache and he was on his way to a dentist (a free one, we suppose) to have two achers taken out.

In the world of sport Connolly is an old story and only a few of the boys give Connolly much of a tumble, anymore. Some say he lost caste a year or so ago when he sunk so low that he actually paid his way into a boxing show. He always denied this, but there were many who were willing to make affidavits. Paying his way in to any place automatically, of course, would ruin his amateur standing in the gate crashers' guild.

Connolly reported he was on his way east, after having made a little trip to Detroit to see a boxing show.

* * *

WOULD the ladies in the audience mind a little boxing story? The chief character is a big heavyweight, meaning a man who weighs more than 175 pounds. This man weighed 214 pounds and stood higher than six feet. Aged about 26. He had just got knocked out by a colored man, much lighter, by the way. Curiously, too, to make the picture a little quaint, the 214-pound man hails from one of the Carolinas. Well, he had been knocked down eight times before the bout was stopped, and now when he was talking he spoke slower even than his usual southern drawl because a painful lip made speech a bit of a test.

"I guess I'll quit," is the way a northerner must write what he said.

"But I wasn't going to quit in that bout if I got killed. No, sir. I got too much spunk for that, bad fighter that I am. I got hurt there in the second round. It was a right hand to the heart that did it. Kinda shook me all over and made me feel funny in my bones. Something like an earthquake must be. Don't seem to be any ground under you any more and your feet sorta reach out like a man feeling his way in a dark stairway—only everything is much quicker than that. Those other punches at the time didn't seem to hurt so much, but I kept remembering that one under the heart.

* * *

"WELL, it took me a long time to find a man who made me feel just thataway and I guess I'd better go in for something else."

* * *

He didn't touch on the mental side of his experience. Perhaps he didn't experience any. But a sharper man would have gone through great agony, aside from the physical pain, for while the colored man was pumping him down, quite a crowd of young men were shouting jocularly at the big fellow's awkwardness on these occasions when he tumbled sort of pell-mell onto the canvas. To get a punch on the jaw is bad enough, we guess, but to have a lot of people standing around, pointing their fingers and laughing must be awful.

* * *

GOLFERS who dub a shot or bridge players who make the wrong lead or ladies at the country club who overbid a 500 hand or trump an ace in euchre might understand the experience, in a small way, of the fighter if they visualized everyone watching their game, say 700 or 800 persons, all laughing uproariously at every mistake. Of course, it would be a little worse, too, if in the meantime someone was cutting your lip with hard punches and varying this with a crack under the heart that made you think you were in an earthquake and that you wanted to run away some place.

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.

Got here just in time to see the Babe win his own game.

Why, these people back here are all excited over the election, while out West everybody is tending to business.

The court here just passed a ruling that the night clubs that they had padlocked here would have to be unlocked. "Where do you suppose people were going to go between midnight and noon?" the judge says. "What do you think this is, Arkansaw or somewhere?"

They claim it was a political move in the first place to deprive the Republicans coming to New York from getting a drink.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

THE PRINCE OF WALES—His Story

wardrobe and regularly inspects his clothes in order to see that the are well preserved and that his stock is not too extensive.

It was the Prince of Wales who was responsible for the resuscitation of the tall silk hat although he selected a model more suitable and fitting for young men than that previously worn. Moreover, he discovered a new angle at which the hat could be worn with advantage, and the jaunty angle at which he wears his hats has been copied with advantage by men all over the world.

The Prince has many followers in the matter of dress and any little deviation he makes from the current fashion is slavishly imitated in many quarters.

As a rule, Prince Edward has a horror of appearing different from other men, but in the matter of dress he can carry uncommon fashions (before they are imitated) with perfect ease and shows no embarrassment on those occasions when he happens to be dressed differently from his companions. On one occasion when he was attending a banquet with his father and brothers, the Prince of Wales was the only person present who wore a flower in his buttonhole. It would have been quite an easy matter for him to remove it without notice, but the Prince preferred to follow his own fancy and the blossom graced his lapel throughout the function. On another occasion the young Prince violated popular custom by appearing at a reception in a dinner jacket with a white vest, when for many years a black vest had been considered the popular complement.

Until quite recently the wearing of gloves was deemed strictly essential both in the street and at social functions. Frequently, however, the Prince casts his gloves out-of-doors whilst in the ballroom or at dinner he has completely suspended the use of gloves—a procedure which has since been almost universally accepted. Once, the Prince of Wales rose to dance with a cigaret between his lips, and for a moment everyone thought that this was the introduction of a modern fashion. But it was a mistake for which he apologized, and instantly corrected.

Brother Married First

While at home, there is always plenty of work to engage the Prince's attention. When not on his tours about the country, he attends to the affairs of those bodies and institutions whose aims have appealed to him sufficiently to gain his active co-operation. On those few days when he finds himself with no engagements, the Prince passes his time in visiting his parents and other members of the royal family. Although firmly established in his own apartments, he does not lose sight of his family for long and nothing pleases him better than to accompany his parents on their tours and visits when his own official program allows it.

With all eyes focused on the Prince of Wales, eagerly awaiting some news of his engagement to a suitable future wife, the surprise was great when the announcement was made that the Duke of York was to be married before his elder brother. His bride was Elizabeth, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Stratmore.

The wedding ceremony was performed on April 26, 1923, the Prince of Wales acting as best man. Dense crowds had gathered to catch a glimpse of the bridegroom as, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Prince Henry, he drove to the Abbey. Throughout the wedding service, the Prince of Wales betrayed the slight nervousness which he felt, but when he handed the wedding ring to the bridegroom he seemed to have regained his sangfroid. The Prince followed the newly-married pair to the vestry after the ceremony, signing the register there.

The Prince's wedding gift to the happy bride and bridegroom took the form of a large, beautifully upholstered motor car, while as a separate present for the bride, he presented her with a fur stole.

Life at Home Simple

From July, 1919, to November, 1927, the Prince of Wales was in separate residence at York House, commonly known as St. James' Palace.

The Prince when at home commences work promptly on the stroke of 10 a. m. The rooms on the ground floor of York House have been turned into a suite of offices where work the Prince's staff. The Prince himself, has a remarkably large amount of clerical work to perform. His mail, which is very large, receives immediate attention of the Prince and his private secretary. H. R. H. keeps a strict eye upon the expenses of his household and this entails frequent audiences with his comptroller.

Before work for the day commences, the Prince takes his daily ride in the park or in the grounds of the Buckingham Palace, performs his course with the Indian clubs, returning to York House for a light breakfast.

There is nothing spectacular about the Prince's life at York House—it is quiet, simple and homely. Quite a large portion of the Prince's spare time is spent in carefully perusing the newspapers, for it is imperative that he should keep a sharp eye on the national events, economic situations, political crises, and so forth, in order that he can better carry on his work.

Chief amongst his hobbies is the collecting of silver pieces. Occasionally the Prince purchares new books in order to keep his library up-to-date. In the quiet of the evenings the Prince enjoys nothing better than a quiet hour listening to the new records. Amongst his repertoire are many old-fashioned songs, although the major portion of his records comprise dance tunes. Occasionally, the Prince amuses himself on the piano although he is but an indifferent player, not having the requisite time to devote to practice. A banjo, a guitar and a ukulele are among the Prince's collection of musical instruments.

Sense of Humor

The Prince is not without a lively sense of humor and takes a keen interest in the gossip which from time to time centers round himself. H. R. H. would not be human if he did not wish to know what people thought about him. He keeps an album containing cuttings of his own activities and which constitute a supplement to his own private journal.

Seated in his easy chair with his favorite pipe between his teeth (the Prince does not favor cigarets as a rule), and a good mystery story in his hand, there is not a happier man in the world than the young Prince. He has a fair library at his disposal and although the names of most of the great writers appear on his shelves, the Prince prefers good sea yarns, adventure stories and detective fiction. He is by no means regardless, however, of the profit to be obtained from studying heavier literature but the perusal of this type of reading is left for working hours. The Prince believes in having a thorough rest when he is off duty.

Photography has a fascination for the Royal bachelor and he can show many interesting snaps of out-of-the-way corners of the globe as well as many of the beauty spots of England and especially the district round Balmoral, Scotland. The album in which these snaps are kept is a wonder of neatness and classification, each photograph being fully described beneath.

The Prince also possesses a wireless set, which is installed in a separate room at York House, commonly known as the "workshop." The set was made entirely by the Prince himself, and he takes an almost boyish interest in this comparatively new science. In his workshop the Prince carries out all his experiments of a mechanical nature, and anything which "works" by electricity is sure to claim his immediate and sustained attention.

Some little surprise has been expressed that the Prince does not turn his energies to literature and produce either works of fiction or travel, but he has no inclination in this direction. He professes wonder at the method in which writers work and admits that he does not know how they "do it." In any case, however, he has so little time that original literary composition is beyond the Prince's scope. He makes up for this, however, by his stories. The Prince is a born story-teller, who can create a vivid word picture, and accompanied by restrained gestures can enthrall his audience.

The Prince of Wales has the greatest affection for his bachelor home, and some of his happiest moments are spent in the seclusion of his own "den" at York House—with his pipe, his books, his gramaphone and his terrier, Cora.

MACKAY TAKES BACK ELLIN AT DYING MOTHER'S WISH

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(Special.)—Clarence H. Mackay, telegraph company millionaire and unforgiving father, has forgiven. Today, he and his daughter Ellin, who chose to brave her father's wrath in order to marry Irving Berlin, are reunited after three years' separation.

The birth of a granddaughter a couple of years ago wasn't enough to soften the heart of the stern old man. A cabled request from his dying mother, while he was in Europe, did prove effective.

He stood yesterday beside the bier of Ellin's grandmother, Mrs. Marie Louise Hungerford Mackay, at Roslyn, L. I. Toward him walked his daughter. Her husband, the young song writer, wasn't there.

As she neared the casket where lay the figure of her 85-year-old grandmother, her father stopped to kiss her. And as he stopped, her arms went around his shoulders.

Whether Berlin is to be included in the forgiveness was not learned.

BUGS BAER Says

WITHOUT seeking to mutilate the multilateral treaty which insures peace between treaties it seems that all is not as it should be.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

First of all, we will start with the 15 nations that plastered the document with their signatures.

The gentle petition was supposed to be signed with a gold pen.

It started off all right. But when the gold pen got back to Kellogg it was a lead pencil.

It looks as if we are in for some more of the peace that passeth all understanding.

If we have really attained world peace, why didn't Ambassador Kellogg bring some samples with him?

Another hindrance to the pact is that doormen of the big movie palaces refuse to give up their martial uniforms.

Why should the Boy Scouts disarm until they are sure of the future?

Europe speaks of world friendship in 15 different languages. That's two more than they used on the Tower of Babel.

We haven't done so well in those happy pow-wows. Every time we sign a peace treaty we find it is just another mortgage.

We have no fault to find with Ambassador Kellogg. He did very well over there. He must be a great man for he escaped with his luggage.

Europe isn't so optimistic over the treaty. The general impression is that it is a bust. But not the kind they put in the hall of fame.

Judging from the last war, the surest bar to trouble and armies is not a peace treaty.

It's a set of broken arches.

A gold pen may be more powerful than a Big Bertha or a depth bomb. But you're liable to run out of ink.

And all we know is that no nation is going to junk its battleboats.

Unless you count Iceland. And that country is only going to lay theirs up for the winter.

Diana Dreams of Benny Black Following Party At the Yacht Club

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

On his first day in Manor Park, where he is to apply the business methods learned in college, Benjamin Carrington Black has occasion to observe three of the suburban town's most alluring examples of femininity. Unnoticed by men, he sees Diana Rand—nineteen and pretty, enter a jewelry store with her friend, Beatrice Sheldon, whose trailing dress is reminiscent of the Gay Nineties. In the store Diana and Bea encounter Ann Evarts, a trim, petite person. Ann in Diana's roadster sees Noddy and Toddy and Norman Gregory and leaves Diana and Beatrice to join them. Bea is furious as she and Diana drive away. She is madly in love with Gregory. Norman hears about Benny being in Manor Park and looks him up. He locates him and invites him to a party at the Yacht Club. He consents to go. Bea and her brother, Freddie, prepare for the party and before leaving their parents warn them to behave like "Sheldons." Freddie calls for Ann, whose mother had just told her she must marry soon or go to work. Diana and her friends meet Benny at the party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

BENNY muttered "Indeed!" and turned his back. Jazz wailed again; it was an encore of the fox trot he had danced with Diana. He started to rise, but Ann's flounces somehow got in the way and when the slight awkwardness was straightened out he saw his partner on the floor with someone else and Ann was murmuring, "Dear Diana is so popular with ALL the men. She's so free and daring—"

"Seems a straight from the shoulder sort," he protested.

"Oh, she is!" A hint of tears in the crooning voice. "It hurts me that people gossip about her so much!"

He studied the flower face, saw only sweetness there. And presently his attention was caught and held by rapid movement—Diana doing another solo dance, arms and legs all flying in a wild hoe-down, the crowd clapping time. Incredible that the girl could perform with such professional skill, such more than professional abandon.

At the end Ben applauded with the rest. But Ann was plucking at his arm. "I think I'd better go home now," she was saying. "Mother doesn't like me to stay when the party becomes—well, a little rough. Would you—we'd love to have you call—"

He promised, shouting, for now the crowd was playing crack-the-whip and the place rang with sound. And Ann stole away, looking very little and frightened, while he remained there, uneasy and vaguely outraged.

CHAPTER VIII.

IT was all over. The last note had blared from the saxophones, the last boom-boom from the drum. The "little man in the tin box" had given a signal and his performers had folded up their instruments and gone away. The last night had been snapped out, the last "So long!" called through the night. The party was over.

And now Diana was at her door, tired, sleepy, but still laughing, telling three good-night.

"Wasn't it the grandest?" Well bye, Noddy—Toddy—"

Casually, without the slightest self-consciousness she leaned down from the top step, placed her hands on the shoulders of those young men and kissed them good-night, each in turn.

Then she glanced at Benny Black, who had joined the little crowd, noted his puzzled surprise, gave a mischievous giggle. "Not kind to slight a stranger, is it?" she demanded.

"Certainly not!" chorused the two.

With this Diana moved to the lower step, still laughing, and lifted her lips.

He hesitated only an instant before his arms went around her, drawing her close.

"Oh," she burst out, "Be yourself!" and wrenched free. She caught his rueful smile then saw resentment cross his eyes and rising a tip-toe kissed him again.

"That's for forgiveness, Benny Black! Bye-ee-eee—"

But she did not wish to say goodby—did not wish him to go. They stood close together, not touching, a long look going between them. And then Noddy complained, "The dogs are barking," and held up a foot—a gesture promptly imitated by Toddy.

"O. K. ole dearies." A swirl of chiffon and velvet; the girl blew them all a kiss and was gone. But after Noddy and Toddy had start-down the drive Benny Black still waited there, staring at the closed door.

A dim light in Millicent Rand's room. Diana entered, stood beside the bed looking down upon her mother and the book she had been reading. "Met a big boot and shoe man from St. Louis, darling, Benny Black." Her tone was vibrant and the mother glanced up quickly.

"Yes, dear? Was he nice?"

"A peach, mother! So different—" She stopped suddenly while Millicent fondled her hand. Bending down, the youngster caught her mother in a quick hug, whispered good-night, turned out the light. "Get a lot of sleep, now. A little tired myself? I am—"

But Diana did not at once go to bed. Just a bit stealthily she unfolded the envelope purloined at the party, studied the dancing feet sketched on it, smiled over the Mercury wings at the heels.

"Silly to put those there," she told herself. "But very nice—"

Ann came into the hotel rather late considering that she had been the first to leave the party. When she had crept away, looking fearful and rather forlorn with Benny Black's eyes on her, she had sought out Freddie's car, where that young man soon joined her. She had shucked off timidity like a disagreeable garment.

"What a bore of a party! Cigaret, please. And is there anything left in that flask?"

He chuckled and muttered, "What a fraud you are! Drink hearty—and save a drop or two."

She handed him back the flask and brought up a sigh. "Why haven't you any money, Freddie? We understand each other don't we?"

His arm made a boa for her shoulders and his lips were pressed to the pale head. But he answered with complete detachment, "Too well, dear Ann. Get along like a pair of strange bull-dogs after the wedding bells had pealed. But this is a bit of all right. Not in a hurry, are you?"

She was not and they took their time. Even so Hanna was up and waiting, a grotesque figure in chin strap, cold-cream mask, rubber gloves. She enquired harshly, "Was I right? Something did happen?"

Ann stretched her arms, began to drop off her clothes before answering. "Maybe—I don't know. A new man—Black—St. Louis—shoe factory—" She threw a disdainful look at Hanna's cheap cotton wrapper as she slipped a lace-trimmed, silken nightgown over her head. The mother gave her such luxury as she could, taking what was left for herself, but Ann returned no thought of appreciation.

Clumsily because of the gloves Hanna brought out a thick book, one which was old and worn by much handling and with the name, "Bradstreet" almost rubbed from the cover. Ann drew near, watched her leaf the pages to the "B"; followed the rubber-covered finger down the list to "Joseph C. Black & Son, St. Louis, Mo."; noted the symbols after the name.

"He's money," stated the woman. Well?"

The girl shrugged, answered petulantly, "If Diana doesn't grab. She's out for him all right."

"Diana!" The hard eyes narrowed and the thin lips closed tightly, pressing together. And after Ann had gone through the bathroom and turned out the light in the tiny bedroom beyond, Hanna still sat there with her lips straight, thinking of Diana.

Freddie shut off his engine as he turned into his father's grounds, bringing the car softly to a stop. Figures detached themselves from the shadow—Beatrice and Norman coming to meet him.

"Father's in the library—sitting up," Beatrice whispered. "We looked through the window. I think he's asleep, but—oh, Freddie, what'll we do? Truly I didn't know it was so late!"

"Cut it out, sis. My window's open—s'long, Norm." He turned his back, knowing that the two immediately came together in a last embrace. By the time he reached the other side of the house his sister was beside him, moving silently.

Stones placed irregularly at the corner of the building jutted out in a precarious ladder and the boy helped her to mount this, watched until she had walked along the coping and disappeared through the open window above his head. Then he followed, springing easily, with the sureness of long practice. He found her trembling in the dark room and gave her a reassuring pat.

"He'll sleep till morning," the boy declared. "Always drops off at midnight and we got in at half past—understand? Thought he was busy and didn't disturb him — remember now. That all straight?"

"Yes—oh—"

"Nix on the hysterics. Get going and tread lightly. 'Night."

"'Night, Freddie."

CHAPTER IX.

BENNY BLACK walked all the way back to the University Club, thinking dilligently, and his thoughts swarmed about two figures, two small girls, alike in that each was lovely and appealing and desirable, yet as different as a sweetpea and a deep red rose.

Ann Evart, Shy, feminine thing, sweet as an angel with her blue eyes adoring him so—the kind of girl a man could be himself with, one who would understand high ambitions and give them due weight. Not a hard-boiled modern sort who would make a holy show of herself dancing while a gang clapped time. . . . How she blushed when Diana let her skirt fly and came sliding along like a young tough!

He would keep his promise, call and see this flower-like creature. Of course he was here to work, not play around, but no use pulling himself into a hole, getting grouchy with solitude. Ann would not interfere with business; she was too gentle for that. . . .

But the other girl forced herself through these reflections. Deep gray eyes held his; laughing red lips formed on the empty air, came nearer and nearer. Once again he felt those lips on his own, the warm fragrance of Diana as he had held her for that brief instant in his arms and flame caught at his heart. A vivid touch, a personality all mocking light, an influence to sweep a man and make him forget everything else. . . .

That look in her eyes at the party—was it contempt? What the devil did she mean by it, anyway? And kissing him—what did she expect a man to think of her? Modern all right in the worst sense of that word; he had reason to know the antics of the breed. Poor little sister Jen! Diana seemed square enough but perhaps quite unconsciously Ann had tipped him off when she said that ALL the men liked Diana. . . .

Reduce Where You Want to Reduce

No Medicines, No Starvation Diet— No Dangerous Exercise

Discovery of infiltrating oxygen reducing cream—quickly and safely banishes double chins, and slenderizes big hips, fat waists, legs and arms.

ANY woman or man who wants to take off fat on any part of the body can now do so quickly and safely. There is no question about this. It is a proved fact.

The discovery of oxygen reducing cream was purely accidental. A great New York doctor asked three of the ablest Colloidal Chemists in New York to try to find a remedy for chronic skin troubles. (Colloidal chemistry is one of the latest developments in chemical science.) These Colloidal Chemists prepared an infiltrating cream which would liberate oxygen when absorbed through the skin. They discovered that whenever the part to be treated was fat, this excess weight quickly disappeared. Reducing tests were then made on fat people with amazing results. One woman reduced her neck one inch in a few treatments; another two inches. Still another took off twenty-nine pounds in six weeks. Equally successful results were had in reducing fat waists, arms, legs, and big hips. So safe is Viaderma, as it is called, that it has the approval of chemists and physicians who oppose all other methods of quick fat reduction.

Viaderma is a golden brown cream, which is rubbed rapidly on the skin. You see the cream disappear at once, leaving a clean white foam on the skin surface. The penetrating cream carries oxygen to the fatty tissues and in a few days' time, this oxygen gradually melts away the excess fat. You get definite results from a single jar which contains an 18 days' supply.

TOUGH LINKS FOR TITLE TEST

The Brae Burn Country Club golf course at Newton, Mass., where the National amateur championship tournament is being played this week, is conceded to be one of the toughest tests the stars could ask. A view of the tree hazards on one of the holes is shown above.

Where Bobby Is Defending Title

TOPOGRAPHY OF CHAMPIONSHIP COURSE

Here is a complete sketch of the hard Brae Burn course, which thwarted some of the stars of the game in their efforts to qualify. There are few soft spots in the layout and the fifth and home holes are considered the toughest to negotiate. A carry of 208 yards is necessary on the tee shot to get over a brook on the last hole. Match play in the tournament began today.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Difficult for Athletics to Rally Again After Latest Repulse—Ruth May Not Break Record But Yesterday's Homer May Have Won Pennant—Bucs' Chance for Second Or Third Place Severely Jolted.

"THEY may get over it, but they'll never look the same." The words of the old song may be applied very aptly to the Athletics today. It will be possible, perhaps, for the more optimistic of their followers to reckon them as being still in the American League pennant running if they succeed in averting a clean sweep and winning the final game of the Yankee series this afternoon, but that third straight repulse yesterday was a terrific blow from the effects of which they may never recover.

Henry Johnson

The defeat represented the loss of two full games to the A's, for the reason that it counted double. Had the Mackmen won, they would now be only half a game behind the leaders, with a chance to go into first place by winning today. But the reverse put them two and a half games in the rear, so that even if they manage to cop the finale today they will still be a box score and a half to the bad.

AND it isn't only the loss of ground that hurts the Macks. The series has been a morale smasher as well, this being particularly true of yesterday's defeat on account of its coming just before the finish when the A's apparently had the game safe in their collective pocket.

It will be a most difficult matter for the Mackmen to regain their former confidence, poise and steadiness after seeing their star trio of starting pitchers—Quinn, Walberg and finally the mighty Grove—crushed by the Yankees, one after another.

ALL season the Yanks have appeared to exercise some sort of spell over the Philadelphians, and the latter may attribute to their own inability to cope with the one rival they had to fear the fact that they are not out in front by a comfortable margin. Of their 21 games with the New Yorkers they have lost 16.

Babe Ruth

The jinx, or psychology or whatever it is, has extended even to certain pitchers.

Bob Grove, a terror to every other club in the league, had won 14 games in a row prior to yesterday, had allowed only one run in 32 consecutive innings, and had not been beaten since the Gothamites downed him on June 27. Of his seven defeats up to date, six were adminstered by the Hugmen, and in four of the seven games he failed to go the distance. The only other club to beat him was St. Louis.

Henry Johnson, on the other hand, has seemed to have something on the A's. They knocked him out in their first meeting on April 21, and defeated him 10 to 0, but since that date he has overthrown the house of Mack five times in succession.

BABE RUTH surely picked out an ideal spot, from a Yankee viewpoint to unload his forty-ninth home run of the year. The Bambino has been performing below normal in homer production during the last few weeks, but he cracked this one just when it was needed to win a most important game. Ruth may not break his record of 60, as he needs 12 more with only 18 games remaining to be played, but yesterday's four-baser was

MALONE TRIPS BUCS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE Pirates reached home early this morning from Chicago, after a 50-50 excursion to the homes of the Cardinals and Cubs. Six hard battles were fought in the two strongholds, the Freebooters winning three and losing as many.

The 9-to-3 defeat sustained by the Pirates in Chicago yesterday gave the natural rivals an even break for the long season, each team winning 11 games. With the Redbirds the Buccos were much less fortunate, Bill McKechnie's pace setters taking 16 of the 22 tilts during the progress of the race.

There is nothing for the Pirates to do today, but tomorrow's open date on their card will be devoted to a clash with the Boston Red Sox. On Friday and Saturday afternoons the Reds will be in Pittsburgh to meet the Buccos, these contests to be the last of the season in the Oakland orchard.

EASTERN TREK IN OFFING

After closing up the books at home on Saturday evening the Pirates will sally forth to New York to begin their last invasion of the East. Although the Buccos are figured to have only a scant chance of winning the flag, the players will fight right down to the last game. The roster is in fine condition for the remaining contests.

The jaunt completed yesterday was highly strenuous. The Pirates hied into the Redbirds four times and took half of the battles, despite the desperate play of the league leaders. Moving to Chicago for two games, the Oaklanders found the Cubs just about as stubborn, each team winning a game.

Manager Bush used eight pitchers in the two games in Chicago in an effort to annex them. Five of these sharpshooters were in action yesterday, but Altoona Pat Malone was in such fine form that he won the decision. Pat working the entire game. Moreover, Malone cracked out a double that scored three runs and in another instance he singled to score a tally. Both of his hits were made with two out.

QUALIFIES IN DEFENSE OF CROWN

Bobby Jones, defending National amateur champion, is seeking his fourth amateur championship in the tournament at Brae Burn. He finished well up in the field of qualifiers in the two 18-hole medal play rounds Monday and yesterday.

BOXING NOTES

JOE DUNDEE, welterweight champion, who recently was knocked out in two rounds by Young Jack Thompson, faces another good puncher when he encounters Johnny Roberts, of Huntington, W. Va., in a non-championship match at Charlotte, N. C., next Monday night. Roberts defeated Pinky Mitchell last Monday night.

Harry Taylor and Young Rudy will meet in the main bout of the card of four 10-rounders for the benefit of the Police Pension Fund at the Point Stadium, Johnstown, tomorrow night. Joe Colombo will oppose Bobby Amster and Jess Hoak will mingle with Tug Phillips in other bouts.

Jim McGirr has completed his card for the opening show of the season in the Palisades roller rink, McKeesport, tomorrow night with the signing of Mike Polo and Howard Williams for the opening bout. Johnny Mellow of Detroit and California Joe Gans will box the main bout of 10 rounds, Jack Unglo and Allen Beatty are paired for the semi-final and Mike Hogan and Dave McConnell will furnish the second event.

Jack McVey and George Courtney have been rematched for a 10-round bout in the Taylor Bowl, Cleveland, next Tuesday night. Courtney won a decision over the Negro boxer in New York a few months ago.

The Young Corbett-Sammy Baker fight in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night will be a 12-rounder and will be backed up by another 12-round melee between Kid Francis and Al Brown, outstanding bantamweight contenders.

The 10-round return bout between Jim Maloney and Jack DeMave, scheduled in Boston last night, has been set back to next Tuesday night because of the indisposition of Ma-

TECH END HURT IN DRILL

TED RESENSZWEIG, promising end of the Carnegie Tech football squad, was badly injured in scrimmage yesterday. It is not known how long he will be kept on the sidelines, and his chances for making the regular eleven, which were bright, may be dimmed.

A light drill was carded today, with another scrimmage Friday.

PITT WORKS ON PASSES

WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 12.—Use of the forward pass was stressed in yesterday's scrimmage in the Pitt football camp near here. A hot sun beat down on the athletes, but the work was pushed nevertheless.

HARRY BROWN BANNED BY STATE FIGHT COMISH

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Several boxers were suspended by the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission yesterday. Among them were Terry McGovern, Chambersville, Pa., suspended indefinitely for taking part in an unlicensed show at Dubois; Ray Crawford, Duquesne, suspended indefinitely upon advice of a Johnstown physician; Henry (Red) Rouch, Sellersville, suspended for 30 days for failing to report at the Anthracite A. C., Pottsville, at the proper time, and Harry Kid Brown, Philadelphia, suspended indefinitely and fined $100 for alleged improper conduct at Ebensburg, Pa., on September 3.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS by HARRY KECK SPORTS EDITOR

IF the Athletics and Yankees were college teams instead of professional aggregations, can't you just imagine the fervor the athletes would be tossing into the crucial series in New York that is drawing to a close?

Instead of methodically going about their business before crowds of world series proportions, they would be all enthused, pepped up by their coaches and ready to "die for dear old Rutgers."

THERE is nothing quite like the college spirit and the methods that are resorted to to bring it to a quick boil. Old grads and stars return to talk to the boys just before they step out on the field for the more important battles, and the coaches rant and storm before the kickoff and between halves to inspire the impressionable boys to great deeds. Frequently the lads have been known to dash out for battle with tears streaming down their faces and just aching to tear their foes limb from limb.

Try to picture paid and hardened players doing that in the big business of organized baseball. Just try to picture it, that's all.

SPEAKING of dying for dear old Rutgers, two versions of the origin of that proud boast have just come to light. One concerns a certain Phil Brett, captain of the Rutgers eleven of 1891, and is related by Coach A. A. Stagg, of the University of Chicago, in "Touchdown," his book on American football.

"Rutgers was using the old V wedge against Princeton," Stagg writes. "The Tigers broke it up, and, incidentally, broke Brett's leg. Sitting on the ground waiting for a stretcher, Brett asked, insouciantly, for a cigaret, adding, 'I could die for dear old Rutgers!' "

Another version attributes the origin of the phrase to Pop Grant, Rutgers '95. According to this story, Grant broke a leg during a scrimmage against Princeton. A Princeton man leaned over him as he lay on the ground and told him his leg was broken.

"I don't care," was the retort. "I'd die for dear old Rutgers!"

THEY do not die for dear old Jake Ruppert or dear old Connie Mack in baseball.

ALONG these lines, I heard recently of a pep-up of the Carnegie Tech freshmen before their all-important game with the Pitt freshmen last fall. Coach Irwin talked earnestly to his players just before game time, and, after he had pleaded with them to go out and win, said he'd like to have them listen to a few words from Wally Steffen, the varsity coach, NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 12.—Bobby Jones, the defending champion, scored a 4-and-3 victory over J. Wolcott Brown, New Jersey titleholder, in the first round of match play in the national amateur championship here today.

NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 12.—Amid the vast astonishment of a meager gallery, which stayed home in droves because of a drizzling rain, George Von Elm and Chick Evans, former champions, passed away quietly in the first round of the national amateur golf championship this morning, and another favorite, Watts Gunn, the 1925 finalist, also was eliminated, being beaten, 4 up and 3 to play, by the superlative game uncovered by Dr. O. F. Willing, the Portland (Ore.) star.

Von Elm lost to Arthur Yates, Rochester, by 3 and 2, and Evans was beaten by his fellow-townsman, John Dawson, 2 and 1.

Meanwhile, the king himself was

Women Play Round Two

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

WITH the women's championship of Western Pennsylvania well into the second round of match play, another tournament which will attract interest throughout the district got under way this morning—the annual invitation tournament of the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Favorites generally advanced in the women's tournament, which is being played over the Allegheny Country Club links, (in splendid condition) under the auspices of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania, and this morning' matches found the going a little tougher in all of the six flights and the consolation eights.

In the championship division Anjeanette Hunter of Stanton Heights, an outstanding favorite to cop, and Mrs. Frank Campbell, a club mate, are fighting it out, while the other matches find coupled Mrs. J. E. Ellen and Mrs. W. G. Boos, Mrs. C. I. Wendt and Mrs. Louise MacDonald and Grace Fagan and Mrs. J Raymond Price, Mrs. Price, by the way, is the only woman who has held the West Penn title other than Mrs. J. Bernd Rose of Allegheny, who won it last year in a come-back spurt and who is not defending it this year.

FIELD CLUB PLAY OPENS

The qualifying round is being run off at the Pittsburgh Field Club, and the field is so very large that the officials are working their best to keep the players running out smoothly. Greenkeeper John McNamara has the course in splendid condition.

The Sandulak company's tournament and dinner at the Ambridge Country Club yesterday was a complete success, and a tribute to the ingenuity of Mike himself. In the regular 18-hole competition, W. T. Jay turned in the best gross card, an 84, which was two strokes better than the score of hi brothers, P. D. Jay and C. D. Jay, Jr., and Lee Moran. Jack Benning was presented the booby prize by virtue of his taking 27 strokes on one hole.

Ed Maloy, himself a former sports writer, was among the leaders, as was Tom Sheridan, who, despite harsh criticism of his "pleted pants" managed to do a little scoring himself. The whole affair was a smashing success.

The qaders' score: W. T. Jay, 43-41—84; Lee Moran, 43-43—86; P. D. Jay, 47-39—86;; G. D. Jay, Jr., 43-43—86; Frank B. Minness, 49-53—102; G. G. Osler, 56-48—102; George Constance, 54-50—104; J. A. Langfitt, 56-50—106; Ed Maloy, 54-52—106. There were about 100 competitors.

Penn State's Grid Outlook Tomorrow

An article reviewing the football prospects for the season at Penn State College, the fifth of a series by Jess Carver, who is covering the various camps in the Tristate district, will appear in tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The prospects of Carnegie Tech, Wash.-Jeff., Duquesne and Geneva already have been presented. Those of Pitt, West Virginia University and others will follow in rapid succession.

Follow this series to get an accurate line on what to expect from the large and small teams of the section this fall.

NEW HAVEN WINS FLAG

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The New Haven Professors clinched their fourth Eastern League pennant in the 13-yearshistory of the organization, but their first in six seasons, by blanking Providence here yesterday, 3 to 0.

PLEASANT VALLEY NINE FORFEITS CRUCIAL TILT

The second half championship fight of the City League came to an ignominious end last evening when Pleasant Valley failed to raise a team for the final game with Hermes-Grove. The Dairymen needed the battle to cop the loop from Reliance Life by one-half game.

The game was scheduled to start at 6 o'clock, Managers Carson and Neely making that agreement. However, the City League rules state that a game cannot be called until 6:45 o'clock, and at that time Pleasant Valley only had seven men in uniform, the two Berger boys being absent. At 6:45 Manager Carson took the game by forfeit, and Chief Umpire Baird announced the game as such. An exhibition game was then staged.

more valuable to his team than a dozen records. It may have won a pennant.

RIGHT-HAND batters who are weak at bunting, and there are many of them in the big leagues who could stand improvement, may find a tip in some remarks by Travis Jackson, the Giant shortstop.

Travis Jackson

Jackson, who is termed by more than one good judge the most adept batter at bunting among all the right-hand hitters in the majors, says the knack of bunting lies in the grip on the bat.

"IF YOU hold the bat tightly," explains the Giants' captain, "you're likely to foul the ball or pop it into the air. I find that the only way to lay the ball down 'dead" is to push my bat at it and, as I do so, to relax my grip on it so that at the moment it meets the ball it is just dropping from my hands. I tap the ball toward third base and, as I am leaving the plate the instant the bunt is made, the pitcher or third baseman has to make a quick move and a long, accurate throw to head me off."

PITTSBURGH's chances of passing either the Giants or Cubs and capturing second or third place before the finish, suffered severely as a result of the Pirates' defeat yesterday. If New York wins only 10 of its remaining 19 games, or Chicago wins only 8 of its remaining 15 contests, the Bucs will be required to win 14 of their remaining 16 engagements to land higher than fourth.

The season's series between the Pirates and Cubs ended in an even break, with 11 victories for each side. The Rovers will remain idle today, an open date. Tomorrow the Boston American League Club will appear here for the first time in 25 years for an exhibition game with the Rovers, and on Friday and Saturday Bush's men will wind up the Forbes Field season with a two-game set against the Reds.

DURING a gathering of football men following the return from Europe of the party headed by Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, Jack Kieran asked Biff Jones: "Who was the best ball carrier you ever saw?"

Jim Thorpe

"I suppose I ought to start by saying that I never saw Jim Thorpe play football," said the Army coach. "But I did see Elmer Oliphant—you all remember him—and I'll take him for the best ball carrier I ever saw. Another point about him is that I only knew him to take time out once in all his playing for the Army. He was on the job all the time, and he kept going."

THE same question about the best ball carrier was put to Rockne, and "Rock" said:

"I'm sorry I can't say I never saw Thorpe play football, because I played against him. Tackling him was like trying to stop a cyclone with an injunction. He was the best ball carrier I ever saw, judging from the glimpses I got as he was going by me or over me."

ASKED as to how many plays a football team should have, the Notre Dame mentor said: "It depends on the team. I should say anywhere from 12 to 40. I knew a high school coach whose team lost a game, and the coach told me he didn't understand it because he had taught them 138 plays. I didn't know there were that many plays. Maybe there aren't."

Joe Sekyra, the Dayton (O.) heavyweight, boxes Earl (Boy) Blue at Youngstown next Tuesday night and K. O. Christner at Akron, September 25.

Andy Tomosky, of Wilmerding, and Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, meet in the eight-round main bout of a show under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Railroad Pittsburgh Division Athletic Association at the Pitcairn baseball park tonight. Bob Krape and Mike Kuzma will box the semi-final. Johnny Haggerty meets Bobby Burns, Frankie Moran engages Young Angelo and George Tomosky will battle Young Iovino in six-round battles. The first bout is scheduled for 8:45 daylight time.

The purses of Cuddy DeMarco and Jack Katfish were held up by the deputy boxing commissioner following their bout at Washington, Pa., Monday night which ended in a victory on a foul for DeMarco in the third round.

Fairmont now has won three games and Wheeling two. A victory for Fairmont in the Wheeling park tomorrow will give the Gems the title.

Before the game Lefty Joe Drugmond, Charleroi pitcher, who was recently voted the most valuable player in the league, was presented with a prize of $100. The score:

PIRATES BUY MAHAFFEY

For the third time, Pitcher Lee Roy Mahaffey, the big right-hander hailing from Belton, S. C., is a Pirate. Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss of the Bucs announced today that Mahaffey has been repurchased from Columbia (S. C.) club of the South Atlantic Association, to which he was sold outright during the training trip last Spring.

Mahaffey first joined the Corsairs in 1926, coming from Columbia. Last year he was sent under option to New Haven in the Eastern League, where he won 13 games and lost 15. He was recalled in the Fall and retained until he had been tried again on the last Spring trip.

The new Pirate led the South Atlantic loop in innings pitched this season, working 276 frames, during which he piled up 127 strikeouts. He won 18 games and lost 16.

Mahaffey will not report to the Pittsburgh club until next Spring.

whereupon Wally stepped out from behind a post, where he had been looking on unobserved, and, grabbing Karcis, the husky fullback, by the shoulders, shook him violently, and, in a voice that shook the rafters, hissed:

Taken by surprise, Karcis was swept off his feet by the sudden onslaught, but in a moment caught himself and bellowed back, emotionally and fighting mad:

"You're DAMNED RIGHT!"

IMAGINE little Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, pulling that one on his big Babe Ruth without getting a bust in the jaw for his pains!

THE main difference that I can see between the college athletes and the paid performers in professional baseball is that in college sports the athletes get worked up to a fighting pitch, while in baseball the fans exude all of the excitement, as was the case when the Yankees and Athletics clashed before capacity crowds and gave me the theme for this column.

Girl Friend—Sure, Oscar. But listen. If you'd put your "jack" into a Goodyear, you wouldn't need it under your car.

Strength in Bond Market.

Many marvel over the strength of bonds in the face of 7 per cent and 8 per cent money. True bonds are off a few points, and there has been no great change in the yield. Action of the bond market is taken by some as indicating that money again will become comparatively easy after the fall demands of business are satisfied, says the Wall Street Journal.

Has Expansion of Outside Loans Proved Blessing?

—By B. C. FORBES—

LOANS made in Wall Street by outsiders—that is, by non-bank lenders—show a modest decrease as the first fruits of the new regulations applied on September 1 by the New York banks. The reduction revealed by the weekly return was only $46,500,000. The banks increased loans for their own account, however, by $114,000,000.

These changes are in the right direction. But much more remains to be achieved.

LOANS made for corporations, individuals, foreigners and others, outside the regulatory powers of the federal reserve authorities, are still about a billion dollars greater than they were a year ago. They still slightly exceed $1,860,000,00. This contrasts with less than half that amount lent by New York banks for themselves. These outside, unregulated lenders have furnished nearly all the increase in brokers' loans during the last 12 months. Now that the banks make a charge of ½ of 1 per cent of the rate realized by this outside money, and now that sums of less than $100,000 are not accepted, the expansion which had become alarming to the thoughtful, may be checked. It is, perhaps, too much to expect, however, that any drastic curtailment will be effected until something untoward happens in the stock market to disturb the peace of mind of the non-bank lenders.

HAS the tremendous expansion in brokers' loans during the last year proved beneficial?

The stock market operator, unless he happens to be a bear, would instantly and enthusiastically reply "yes." Unless speculators had been abundantly supplied with funds, at low rates, it is extremely doubtful whether the boom in stocks would have occurred.

But what have been some of the effects of this stock market boom, entailing a constant cry for more and more loans?

Money rates have been forced up to the highest levels in years, not only for speculative purposes, but for other funds. Call money quotations ranging from 7 to 10 per cent have been accompanied by a rise in time loans to 6½ per cent, a rate which compares with 4 per cent a year ago, and commercial borrowers have been similarly affected.

Secretary Mellon found himself compelled for the first time in more than four years, to pay 4½ per cent for short-term funds required by the government, a charge which contrasts with a rate of 2¾ per cent in 1925. The high price of money doubtless contributed to the piling up of undigested bonds on the shelves of underwriters during recent months, leading to the lightest August offerings in years.

Less easy to estimate is the extent of the ill-will aroused towards "Wall Street" by agricultural and other borrowers throughout the country, who blame the high rates imposed upon them on our stock market speculators.

THE writer has regarded this inordinate expansion in unregulated lending by outsiders as fraught with danger. One reader, Herbert G. Fuchs, writes:

"If we draw away the veil we will find that these 'irresponsible' lenders are in great majority no other than our own prominent corporations, many of whose directors are also directors of banks. In years past loans have been heavily called at what seemed most inopportune times, due, according to reports, to heavy withdrawals by out-of-town bank lenders. They have shown no scruples in withdrawing their funds from the market regardless of the consequences to others.

"If anything, this 'new species' of call loan lender would be the very one willing to let funds stay out on call in times of stress and emergency, knowing that such funds are well protected by a good margin of safety in collateral, maintained by additional calls. Furthermore, in times when it is urgent to disturb the loan situation as little as possible, it is more than likely that these corporation depositors could be as easily appealed to to maintain their loans in the market as the banks in such situations. It would appear even more likely that such loans would be more stable than those of the banks, themselves, who must maintain a strong cash position during such times to meet possible contingencies."

TIME alone will tell. Personally I would rather see regulated lending than unregulated lending.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The cotton market opened quiet but steady today at an advance of 8 to 13 points, October selling to 18.12c and March to 17.87c on covering combined with trade and commission house buying and relatively steady Liverpool cables. Further reports of deteriorating crop prospects in the South were received.

The advance met considerable southern selling and prices eased off 4 or 5 points from the best at the end of the first hour. A private crop report placed the yield at 14,102,000 bales and domestic consumption was estimated at 505,000 bales against 438,743 for July. Continental and Bombay buying and trade calling was reported in Liverpool.

Bullish features in the weekly report of the weather bureau brought in a little forenoon buying, which was supplied at net advances of 10 to 16 points, and prices reacted a few points later on continued southern and local selling. October eased off from 18.34c to 18.02c and March from 17.86c to 17.84c, the market ruling about 6 to 6 points net higher at midday.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Prosperity for Balance of Year Indicated—Orderliness in Operation of Manfacturing Plants Pay.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

EVIDENCE that good business can be expected for the remainder of this year is becoming more convincing. The automobile makers are producing cars at an almost unprecedented rate for this season of the year. Some companies are breaking all previous production records.

FORD, whose idleness upset the automobile output figures for so long, has increased his production to over 4,500 cars a day. By the end of this month 5,000 cars a day will be rolling from the assembly lines. This has been the goal of Ford efforts since the new model was placed on the market.

ANOTHER large producer which has lagged behind previous records for some time has been Dodge. This company has been showing a steady increase all year. The fine lines of the new Senior Six have attracted widespread attention. It is understood that the Chrysler engineers had started to take a hand in Dodge production even before the merger of the companies was accomplished.

CROP reports from most parts of the country have been good. This is largely responsible for the fact that the farm implement manufacturers expect the greatest year in their history. Such a record in sales will follow an exceptionally good 1927 record, which was the best year since the post-war depression.

AN increase in unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation of 53,116 tons during August was another favorable factor in the outlook. There is little reason to believe that any substantial amount of buying for fourth quarter took place as early as the end of August. There undoubtedly was some forward contracting to get under the higher price line before the end of third quarter. The great amount of rush ordering indicates, however, that no great tonnage went into stock.

AN influence which will help the railroad car builders over the next two years, even though it may not be of immediate benefit, will be the retirement of over 400,000 wooden-frame freight cars. The American Railway Association has adopted a ruling by which such antiquated cars cannot be transferred from one line to another after 1931.

THE railroads have done little buying of rolling stock for the past three years. The elimination of these cars will wipe out any surplus of equipment now in the yards of the carriers. A large share of them may have to be replaced with new equipment.

THE leading corporations are devoting increased attention to the neat appearance of their plants. Money spent to clean up a factory may seem like unnecessary devotion to orderliness, but actually it pays dividends.

REDUCTIONS in the number of accidents is the primary result obtaitned from the elimination of unnecessary piles of material and of scrap in the vicinity of machinery. A place for everything and everything in its place leaves little for a man to fall over in a shop. It also increases efficiency by removing obstructions to work.

One steel corporation, after several warnings, discharged the superintendent of a plant for not being able to keep his mill in an orderly condition.

THE Ford Motor Company plants, which have become almost a symbol of American efficiency to foreign observers, are models of neatness.

The directors of a local corporation recently made an inspection trip of a plant they had bought a year before. The management had made a great change in the appearance and the efficiency of the plant, although no fundamental alterations had been made in the equipment. One director remarked, "If this mill had looked like this a year ago we would have been willing to pay a million dollars more for it."

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Influenced by the Canadian government report pointing to the largest crop on record, wheat prices here tended downward early today. In some quarters, opinions were expressed that the Canadian production forecast was an under-estimate. Opening ⅞ to 1c off, Chicago wheat later showed but little power to rally. Corn was irregular, starting at ⅛c decline to an equal advance, and subsequently holding near to the initial range. Oats were firm. Provisions showed steadiness.

At noon wheat was ⅝c to ⅞c net lower and corn varying from ¼c decline to 1⅛c advance.

With Canada officially scheduled as now harvesting the biggest yield of wheat known in that country, wheat traders here paid little heed today to advices of damage which had been done by frost and hail or to word that rain had interfered with cutting. It was acknowledged that wet grain would be a problem, but such drawbacks were virtually ignored for the time being. Bearish official estimates of the German wheat and rye crops were also current.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Town Hall Site Selection Hard Puzzle to Solve

Selection of a site for the town hall proves that getting the money to build it was an easier task. As in the case of other improvements in the recent bond proposals the citizens of the county, by their vote, showed they were willing to spend the amount required. Now that we have the money available, the big problem is how to spend it.

It is generally held that the site selected should best serve the interest of the public, but there are many views as to that. Downtown? North Side? Oakland? Where shall it be? One suggestion made to Council is that a comprehensive study be made to cover the relation of the building to its service, with consideration of all factors such as convenience of location, with respect to accessibility to street car riders, motor car riders, pedestrians and all other matters which have a bearing on the decision.

In a matter of such great importance there naturally will be need of giving heed to many suggestions and the result may be that in the end there may be such a maze of claims for consideration that progress would be impeded. It would seem that a very good way to proceed would be to reduce all requirements to as few major factors as possible. Of course the first consideration must be that the building is to be for use, and for the use of the greater number with the least inconvenience.

Big Deficit

Why Build Palaces?

Uncle Sam, it seems, will be short $94,279,346 in his 1929 budget.

Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget, says the estimated surplus of $252,540,283 has changed to the sad DEFICIT.

Estimated receipts have fallen off more than $100,000,000, and the estimated expenditures of the government are up more than $244,000,000.

This will give Gov. Smith a chance to repeat his statement that "Coolidge economies are fictitious."

How would it be to stop spending the people's money on a palace for ambassadors in Paris? And how would it be if Mr. Coolidge should veto the plan announced recently, under which expensive sites would be bought in various countries, and fine palaces built for other ambassadors from the United States?

When these ambassadors contribute to the presidential campaign it is well understood that they buy an appointment abroad. But if they also buy a palace they ought to contribute MORE.

Two individuals, for instance, not long ago, each contributed $40,000 and each was sent abroad to represent Uncle Sam. Forty thousand dollars is too little for the right to live in palace costing more than a million.

Wise Mr. Kellogg

He Set a Good Example.

There was talk about Secretary Kellogg going to Europe on a warship. Thousands of tons of coal would be burned carrying the secretary across the water. And he was to make his trip from France to England also by warship across the arrow channel.

It happens that Mr. Kellogg is a sensible person from the Middle West, and he evidently decided that whatever was good enough for Benjamin Franklin was good enough for him. He sailed on the Ile de France, a gigantic French liner, a thousand times more comfortable than any warship, and he went at much greater speed.

He traveled at much less expense to the people of the United States, without foolish, undemocratic ostentation.

His choice of the French line will delight his French hosts.

Good News for Silk Worms

Progress Helps Everybody.

Once, in Japan, to take silkworms or their eggs across the Japanese border was a crime and was punishable with death. Japan wanted, but could not keep, a monopoly of the silk industry.

Now, in the days of "Rayon," or artificial silk, it wouldn't matter much, and adult silkworms may rejoice in the prospect that their children may no longer be boiled alive in the cocoon.

All over the world factories making artificial silk are springing up. North Carolina is just building one to cost $8,000,000.

The Japanese girl that picked mulberry leaves to feed the young silkworms is now working in Japanese artificial silk factories. So the world changes.

Dr. Butler?

He's a Good Democrat.

Dr. Butler, head of Columbia College, says Hoover won't do; he is too dry.

Mr. Raskob, late of General Motors, now managing the Democratic party, says: "I wish I knew how I could get Dr. Butler into our party."

Dr. Butler is in already. This campaign is a fight of wets and drys, for and against prohibition. If you are dry, you are Republican; if you are wet, you are a Democrat, although you may not know it.

Dr. Butler is wringing wet, and so he is a Democrat.

A CROSS-TOWN PUZZLE

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Rhythm and Life

A VERY interesting analogy between the life phenomena of animals and certain reactions of inorganic substances, such as iron and other metals is described in Science by Professor Ralph S. Lillie. The technics of this investigation are not for the layman, but the interest of the subject is so great that some statement of the conclusions reached, or suggested, seems appropriate for popular reading.

The subject of the inquiry is the "analogies between physiological rhythms and the rhythmical reactions in inorganic systems."

The emphasis is upon RHYTHM—periodicity, pulsing, alternation of active and passive periods. The beating of the heart, for instance, is rhythmic. Iron placed in nitric acid exhibits a rhythmic reaction, accompanied by the periodical formation and removal of a thin surface film. This is characteristic of both physiological and inorganic reactions. "The parallels with the rhythmical reactions of living tissues (of the heart, nerve centers, cilia) have long attracted attention," says Professor Lillie.

Armco wire placed in nitric acid shows remarkable rhythmic properties, and the essential condition determining the persistent rhythm is found to be the presence of some local area, or areas, in which the reaction of the metal with the acid is continuous. "Such a continually active region," says Professor Lillie, "may be compared with the nodal, or pace-making, region of the heart, or with the basal body, or 'blepharoplast' of a cilium. It exerts a constant activating influence to which the external passive part of the wire responds as soon as it is sufficiently recovered."

Both in the case of heart beat and in that of the reaction of passive iron the rhythm is affected by electrical polarization. Other details of resemblance to heart action are pointed out.

The general interest of these observations lies in their bearing upon the question of the nature of life. Is it possible upon such analogies to predicate the essential identity of vital with chemical and electrical action? And if it is, can we go farther, as some wish to do, and affirm that this definition of life covers it completely, including everything that any living creature possesses, even the phenomena of "will" and "reason?"

If so, then the work of biological science would seem to consist in destroying, by turning into illusion, everything that mankind has hitherto cherished as its distinctive birthright.

The analogy of rhythmic action may be carried very far. An Indian scientist has found "heart beat" in trees. The succession of waves, or vibrations of any kind, is rhythmic. The sun-spot period is irregularly rhythmic; the grand generalizations at which modern astronomy is arriving, show the whole universe as a mighty rhythmic system, with, perhaps, "pace-making regions" through whose continuous activity the cosmos of suns is maintained in perpetual existence. Passing from the "infinite" to the "infinitesimal," we find at the other end, if the latest theories are correct, that atoms themselves are similar systems, and their "electrons" only rhythmic frequencies.

A Prayer Trust

WONG NAI GEN, a 15-year-old Chinese boy, earns a profit of $400 a week from his Cambridge laundry, where he employs five men.

"The Chinese are a remarkable people," said a Boston reporter. "When I called on Wong Nai Gen to interview him, he was tearing off a leaf from a thing like a Chinese calendar that hung above his desk.

"'What is that? A Chinese calendar,' I said.

"'No,' said he; 'it's a Chinese prayerbook. Each leaf is a prayer. I tear off a leaf night and morning, for the good pray twice a day.'

"Then he went on to explain that a Pekin corporation has the monopoly of these prayerbooks, a copyright protects them, and anyone who infringes the copyright gets a year in jail.

"'Don't be astonished,' said young Wong Nai Gen, 'that at the age of 15 I am making $400 a week, for I belong to a remarkable people, a people with a prayer trust. What are meat trusts or oil or steel trusts beside such a trust as that?

"The revolution? Oh, no; the revolution won't interfere with the Pekin prayerbook monopoly. Trust the trust for that,' said Wong Nai Gen."

Do Successful Men Bore You?

WHEN you are in the society of a number of successful men, you think they look like an ordinary lot.

Their clothes are not smart, ties are twisted and you see many a wrinkled trouser leg.

So-called "bright remarks" are seldom heard.

Words are not wasted and there is an earnestness in the atmosphere which bores you.

You wonder how they can be so interested in what you consider dry and profitless discussion.

It surprises you that they can be so enthusiastic about the productions for which they are responsible.

Inanimate things don't appeal to your mentality.

You want life and energy and wit and constant movement.

To sit hours studying about manufacturing and bargaining and meeting the market demands is hard for you to understand.

All because you are not a business man—you are not commercially inclined, yet you think you might be better off if you were in business.

Well, you wouldn't because your heart would be elsewhere.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

At Dusk

AT dusk last night the moon slipped up
Through veils of lilac mist,
While all the valleys verdant cup
Was wreathed in amethyst.

Red-gold against the sky it swung,
A symbol of delight,
A shining lamp of challenge, hung
To mock the gloom of night.

At dusk last night I think there died
Some folly in my breast,
For it was then I put aside
Old dreams too long possessed.

The moon against the sky, red-gold,
Taught me to see aright
How life itself will always hold
A lamp that mocks at night.

Great Passages from the Bible

Solomon's Riches and Wisdom

(II. Chronicles, 9; 13-27)

NOW the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold:

Beside that which chapmen and merchants brought. And all the kings of Arabia and governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon.

And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.

And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and stays on each side of the sitting place, and two lions standing by the stays:

And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps. There was not the like made in any kingdom.

And all the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold: none were of silver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

For the king's ships went to Tarshish with the servants of Huram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

And king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart.

And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

And Solomon had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot cities, and with the king of Jerusalem.

And he reigned over all the kings from the river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.

And the king made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycomore trees that are in the low plains in abundance.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

WHEN older folks go to school to see the kids perform in the classrooms, the old ones are likely to see a lot of things they think is foolishness. I've often heard of practical parents that has almost decided to take their youngsters out of school after a visit.

Well, there was an old guy that had a kid in the fourth grade or something, and he went to the school one day just to see how Tommy was behaving himself. The teacher was doing numbers with the kids, and she says, "Say kids, how much is one-ninth of five-eighths?"

Nobody could answer the first time around, and the teacher began ragging the youngsters for not knowing such a simple thing. Then she asked Tommy, and Tommy started to cry because he couldn't answer before his old man. The old boy couldn't keep still no longer.

"Aw, shucks, Miss Jones," he bellows, "what you tease the kids about one-ninth of five-eighths for? You know darn good and well it ain't enough to bother about anyhow!"

Her Mistake

THE visitor to the hotel paused on the threshold and inspected what lay beyond.

"This won't do," she declared. "I won't have this room. I refuse to pay all that money for such a small room. You think that you can—"

The uniformed attendant smiled at her pityingly.

"Step in, madam," he interrupted. "This ain't your room. This is the lift!"

O. O. McINTYRE

CATALINA, Sept. 12.—This narrow 22-mile-long island is about two hours out in the Pacific by boat. It is owned by William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum merchant, and a kind of tribute to a nation's industrious jaws. It is extremely mountainous, the highest peak being 2,111 feet high.

Bought by the millionaire as a "play thing," it is said to be proving a financial bonanza. It combines a certain swank and county fair manner. Many movie stars own homes here, including Tom Mix, whose palatial mansion has his name in huge electric lights on its rooftop.

The eastern banker in his natty plus fours rubs elbows with the tin-can tourist from Fergus Falls, and there are plentiful cafeterias along with huge palm-fronded cafe patios. There are Tent Villas and magnificent hotels with expensive tariffs in a mixed medley.

The Catalina Aviary is the largest bird cage in the world, and here in the seven-acre space one may see in flight the African crowned crane, flamingoes, silver and gold pheasants, Australian swan, Abyssinian pea fowl, Mandarin ducks and flocks of cockatoos and parrots.

The island is primarily the fisherman's paradise. It is in these waters the nimrods have their fierce battles with the leaping Tuna, the hardest fighting fish known. Sometimes fishermen are carried far out to sea. The Tunas range in weight from 80 to 250 pounds, and it is needless to say the sport turns out some gosh-awful fibbers.

For those whose fishing is confined to the spearing of a canned sardine for the midnight lunch, there is also golf, bathing, boating, mountain climbing and horseback riding. Having no particular yen for these, my interest centered in the cathedral chimes which rang every quarter of an hour.

My impression of Catalina is that it is a delightful spot to spend the day, but I would not care to begin a serial story here. Something about an island makes me fidgety—the same sort of a feeling I have when an elevator hesitates between floors. I'm a peninsula boy.

Along with countless other yaps, we went for a view of the submarine gardens through a glass-bottomed boat. If it were all like this, burial at sea would not be so bad. One drifts through great trees of kelp and other waving and luxuriant foliage. Fish of all colors swim up in their glum fashion to gaze at you in the frank manner of goldfish in a bowl. One of them resembled Barney Gallant. There are beautiful shell-encrusted rocks and what seems to be gardens and groves. A deep sea diver gives an exhibition beneath the boat. Yet all the while I could not help thinking what would happen if a pouting mermaid hurled a nice big rock.

On the isthmus here is a resort maintained chiefly for moving pictures "on location." It is a view all have seen at various times on the screen. A nasty villain was pursuing a frightened and tremulous heroine hell-for-leather toward a cliff this afternoon, dad gast his onery hide.

Osteopathic and chiropractic doctors flourish on Catalina. There seems to be a covey of them in every block. And apparently they jerk a mean neck and twist a snappy spine, for they are crowded.

These languorous places "where Nature smiles all the while" are too much like a Belasco setting for me. After a time we long for Nature to frown a while. Climate can become as monotonous as a radio announcer. At this precise moment I do not care if I do not see the sun for an entire week. And if this be treason—choose your weapon, for I do not believe there is anything more entrancing than a howling old-fashioned snowstorm in Madison Square on a starry December night.

One of the peaks here from a certain angle has the appearance of a Dutch comedian's head, chin whiskers, puffed cheeks and all. Just a mountain, I suppose, trying to act silly.

False Logic

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

"Now," says the trickster, "if the spirits did not help me do that, tell me how it was done."

But because you cannot explain his method is no proof that his aid was supernatural. It is simply proof that he is cleverer than you.

Here is a bottle of Hokum's Universal Ointment. Its advertisement says that it has cured thousands, why not you? The flaw in this is that it has not cured thousands. They got well anyway. Epsom salts is one of the best of medicines. If some quack had discovered it, it would be worth millions.

It is a mistake to suppose that a thing must be black or white. It may be gray.

A man said that he could ask a lawyer a question that could not be answered by yes or no. "What?" said the lawyer. The man replied: "Have you stopped beating your wife?"

A doctrine that has impeded progress in many lines has been the doctrine of "either—or".

Either this thing is true and the other false or this is false and the other true.

No middle road; no compromise; no conciliation; no possibility to see the mixture of truth and error in both.

A recently published book, called "The Survival Value of Christianity," points out the impeding effect of the either-or attitude in the field of religion.

In 1615 Pope Paul V and the Inquisition maintained that either Galileo's sun-centered astronomy, which taught that the earth moved, was false or else the whole Christian faith was shipwrecked.

His tested ideas were refuted by the argument: "Animals which move have limbs and muscles; the earth has no limbs or muscles, therefore it does not move."

That settled it. The old astronomer was forced to his knees before the Inquisition to "abjure, curse and detest the error and heresy of the movement of the earth."

Yet today, when only the most unenlightened ignoramus maintains that the earth stands still, the power of Christianity has been far from abolished.

In 1724 John Hutchinson, a professor at Cambridge, claimed that belief in the Newtonian theory of gravity constituted "infidelity" and that it was a clear case of either Newton's teachings or the Bible.

Yet the law of gravity has been accepted and the influence of the Bible has gone on just the same.

John Wesley is reported as saying: "The giving up of witchcraft is in effect the giving up of the Bible."

Yet no one in his right mind today believes in the existence of witches, and the Bible is now more widely read than ever.

In almost every case in the past the two horns of the terrible dilemma of "either-or" have, in the end, been ignored and the new advancement in the understanding of physical laws has been accepted without detriment to religion.

They may have injured individual conceptions of religion, but they have not affected religion itself. The little bayous may have been dried up, but the boundless ocean has remained the same.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

COMES a male and inquires: "What is it that makes marriage such a hateful contract? The thing to consider these days is not "can I support this woman," but "how much alimony would she ask." The amount differs very materially with different types, and there are some who wouldn't take money from a man with whom they could not agree and live happily. Oh yes, there are, but you have to get a strong spy glass to find them.

This same male person asks what it is that makes women demand alimony beyond all reason, and then hound men till they are worn out financially, physically and morally.

The amount of alimony is regulated by the price of luxuries. As to "physically and morally," when a woman gets a divorce she is no longer interested. As to "financially," when he is financially finished, the reason she quits nagging him is evident. That's all there is, there isn't any more!

"Why," says the male voice, "should a man have to have his character besmirched just because a woman accuses him? He is not able to set himself right in the minds of those who read about him, till he has his day in court."

Cowslips and bluebells! How old fashioned the man is, why does he suppose a woman files such bills?

Male innocence asks: "What makes women want to imprison their husbands?"

They do that when the male defies them. Did you ever try to defy a woman? Boy, you haven't tried anything yet!

The male thinks, he says, that alimony is excessive, and the judges allow it.

My word! Does he know, I wonder, what finger-waves cost? Just $2 a throw! And a bleach mask is $10. Stockings from $3 to $15. Ice cream and tea in the best places, $1.50. To say nothing of chinchilla coats and cunning little mink capes, and sweet little ermine wraps. Us women have to LIVE!

There is no use woofing about it. If we condescend to marry you, there is no reason why you shouldn't pay—and pay and pay.

But just incidentally, I know a divorced woman who doesn't get alimony, and who sends her husband all his ties and shirts (monogramed) and handkerchiefs. She knows he likes nice things and that he can't afford them.

She is just one of life's mysteries.

Salt Cellar

AT an auction of art objects and antiques held in London, a salt cellar that dates from the time of Queen Elizabeth sold for $10,237.

There are many American cellars that would command that price in refined bootlegging circles. But they do not contain salt.
